Bonds Up—Wheat Down
Bottles and Unions Smashed
Welcome Shibusawa
The Cost of Idleness

—By Arthur Brisbane—

Copyright, 1921.

Four and three-quarters per cent. Liberty Bonds sold at par yesterday. This writer, who bought $300,000 of them in the exciting days, promised readers that they would one day sell above par, and they will. There is in all the world no investment as safe. As money gets cheaper, because men fear to invest in industry, U. S. bonds will go up.

Wheat goes down. It sold at 98 cents a bushel yesterday. Formerly a bushel of wheat and a day's labor were worth about the same. Roman soldiers, marching, chewed raw whole wheat, carried in a bag at the waist. That explains the wonderfully strong, flat teeth still found in old Roman skulls.

Recently wages have got away from the level of "one bushel of wheat for one day's work." But you notice that as wheat drifts below a dollar, there are five or six million idle Americans that would like to be sure of even one dollar a day for the next hundred days.

One bushel of wheat will keep a family alive for several days, with cold water added. And thus far the plan has been to give the run of men only as much as would keep them alive.

Eleven thousand milk wagon drivers on strike in New York are smashing milk bottles, overturning wagons labelled "milk for babies." The employers, as is natural, hide gladly behind the babies' long skirts. Drivers, without knowing it, are smashing their unions while smashing milk bottles. They may be in the right —only the angel Gabriel knows about that.

But employers, wisely advised, had no lockouts or strikes while labor was scarce in war. Labor, not advised, is playing the employers' game, abandoning jobs, with five million idle, waiting for their places.

Shibusawa, richest Japanese, is in America, traveling with fifteen Japanese big gun financiers. His object is to establish "better relations" between Japanese and American financiers. Let him not fret, his task will be easy. Finance knows, and sympathizes with finance, whether its skin be white, brown or yellow. Labor of different nations and colors fights, finance never.

Viscount Shibusawa, eighty-two, will find only glad, outstretched hands. American finance will say:

"Come right in, sit down. Want to sell? We'll buy. Want to buy? We'll sell. Glad to see you?"

That's why finance rules. It is intelligent and unprejudiced. As Lord Beaverbrooke said here a little while ago, "The British Empire deals with anybody, including cannibals."

Two thousand Sinn Feiners, captured while trying to kill men wearing the British uniform, are set free by England with no conditions or strings attached to their liberty. The English have intelligence.

Freeing the Sinn Feiners will seem strange to our Washington gentlemen, keeping old Debs in jail for merely talking.

This nation doesn't realize its biggest losses or what causes them to run the government costs a little over three thousand million dollars a year. Harold A. Hatch, an expert, says that idleness costs the country four thousand milliion dollars a year.

About three thousand millions additional is wasted by "slowing up" by workmen foolishly afraid to produce too much. There you lose twice what it costs to run the government, army, navy and all foolishness combined.

H. G. Wells, asked yesterday what Russia needed, replied: "To be let alone, allowed to recover." Russia will come back when the United States decides to do the sensible thing. Russia is the only country in the world that could ever be greater than the United States—in wealth and resources, as she is greater now in size, population and undeveloped possibilities.

Smooth gentleman from Japan will soon tell the Washington conference that the Mikado yearns for peace and all Japan hates war.

You get more accurate information when you read a cable from Tokio announcing the murder of Hara, Japanese Prime Minister. He is the first Japanese without aristocratic birth to head the Japanese government. He really wanted peace, a cutting down of war expense. That's why they murdered him.

Sacco Trial Again Under Guard

TROOPERS RUSHED TO DEDHAM

State Constabulary and Searchlights Used a Hearing is Resumed

With a score of State constabulary, mounted and on motorcycles, a dozen special officers and deputy sheriffs, all heavily armed, guarding the Courthouse, the hearing of the petition for a new trial of Nicolo Sacco and Bartolmeo Vanzetti was resumed before Judge Webster Thayer in Dedham Superior Court today.

The two prisoners, convicted by a jury of the murder of a South Braintree paymaster and guard, spent the night in Dedham Jail, and were escorted to the Courthouse today, shackled together and to two deputy sheriffs, by a squad of police and constabulary, while the other officers patrolled the streets and guarded the Courthouse.

The crowd gathered for the hearing was far larger than that which listened to the opening arguments last week, but was quiet and orderly.

HEARING DELAYED.

The hearing was delayed more than three-quarters of an hour by a conference among counsel for the prisoners and Judge Thayer. Frederick H. Morse, attorney for Vanzetti, who had still more than an hour of his time left from the opening session of the hearing last week, resumed his address by presenting to Judge Thayer authorities on two questions raised by the court.

These concerned the extent to which a court is permitted to go in setting aside a jury verdict on insufficient evidence, and also in regard to the weight that should be given to the evidence submitted by government witnesses during the trial of the two accused men.

Moore then proceeded with his attack upon the testimony offered by ten or twelve government witnesses, all of whom, although on the ground at the time of the murder, were un-

Capt. Gordon Discharged by Chief

Police Captain Herbert Gordon of Cambridge, suspended last Tuesday on charges of misconduct, was summarily dismissed from the Cambridge force today by Chief John J. McBride.

McBride adopted this drastic course when neither Gordon nor William H. Lewis, his chief counsel, appeared at headquarters at the hour set to be tried on the charges by a board of three police captains. William H. Kane, from Lewis' office, appeared to argue in favor of a continuance until Lewis returns from Washington.

His removal leaves Captain Gordon the recourse of an appeal.

The charges against Gordon grew out of the Tufts trial, when he was named as alleged co-conspirator of District Attorney Nathan A. Tufts in several cases.

PLATE GLASS CRASHES ON WASHINGTON STREET

Several pedestrians on Washington street today had narrow escapes from injury when a large plate glass window on the fourth floor of the building at the corner of Avon street was broken by the wind and crashed to the sidewalk. Dr. R. J. Saunders, a dentist in the office, secured a rope, rushed to the street and roped off the sidewalk just before the crash.

CRAIG AND PREMIER CONFER

Ulster Leader Discusses Irish Peace Settlement With Lloyd George

London, Nov. 5 (by the Associated Press).—Sir James Craig, the Ulster Premier, had a long interview with Prime Minister Lloyd George at the latter's official residence, soon after his arrival today. Austen Chamberlain, government leader in the House of Commons, also was present.

After Sir James left the Prime Minister's residence he was quoted by a representative of the Belfast Telegraph as stating he had called on Lloyd George and Sir Robert Horne, Chancellor of the Exchequer, as a result of an invitation received today. Sir James, according to the newspaper representative's version, added:

"I have arranged that if, and when, Ulster's interests are reached in the Irish conference, all the Ulster representatives will be asked to attend. In the meantime nothing will be settled behind our backs.."

MOVES TO DISBAR TUFTS

Grievance Committee of Middlesex Association Votes to Start Proceedings

The Council of the Middlesex Bar Association today voted unanimously to instruct the grievance committee of the association to start disbarment proceedings against Nathan A. Tufts.

Testimony in the trial which resulted in the removal of Tufts from office as district attorney of Middlesex County, by order of the Supreme Court, was referred to as laving the Bar Association no other course.

Word of the action of the council, which is the most important subdivision of the Bar Association, was immediately forwarded to Attorney-General J. Weston Allen.

Today's step sets at rest the speculation which has been general since Tufts' removal as to whether his critics would go the length of seeking to disbar him.

The council met in the office of Samuel L. Powers, No. 101 Milk street, and those present and voting included: Samuel Powers, George L. Mayberry, Frank M. Forbush, Samuel K. Hamilton, Theodore Eaton, Charles M. Harris, Gilbery A. A. Pevey, Arthur P. Stone, Judge Prescott Keyes, Augustin J. Daly, Frank W. Kaan, Joseph Wiggin, George P. Drury, Harold P. Johnson, Ralph E. Joslin and John M. Merriam.

The vote was as follows: "That the Committee on Grievances be authorised and instructed to bring a petition for the disbarment of Nathan A. Tufts and that said committee have full power in the premises."

The Council's instructions were based on the report of the grievance committee, which had commented on the Tufts case as follows: "A careful examination of the opinion of the Supreme Judicial Court led the committee to recommend that disbarment proceedings be begun."

Gilbert A. A. Pevey signed the report of the grievance committee.

CHURCHMEN LAUD WORK OF CHRISTMAS BASKET FUND

Two more leading churchmen of Greater Boston have joined with Cardinal O'Connell in praising the Boston American's Eighth Annual Christmas Basket Fund. The fund was started with a contribution of $1,000 from the Boston American, and it is expected that hundreds more families will be fed this year than at any time since the fund was inaugurated

The two additional churchmen who have endorsed the fund are: Bishop Edwin H. Hughes of Malden, a leader of the Methodist Episcopal Church, and the Rev. A. Z. Conrad, widely known pastor of the Park Street Church.

In his letter of endorsement Bishop Hughes said: "You are given the liberty to use my name in connection with your Christmas Basket Fund. I shall be happy if my influence will contribute in any real degree to your good enterprise."

The Rev. Dr. Conrad wrote: "The Boston American Christmas Basket Fund has rendered a very valuable service, and is to be highly commended from every standpoint. The intelligent and discriminating manner in which the distribution is made is admirable. The public response should be large to this benevolence."

Cardinal O'Connell's letter of indorsement was printed Friday.

"I am inclosing my contribution and I hope that it will be of service."

Checks for $50 each have been received from Herbert E. Yerxa and James D. Casey, president and vice-president, respectively, of the Cobb,

STRIKING MILKMEN IN GUN FIGHT WITH POLICE

New York, Nov. 5.—Fifty striking milk drivers attacked a plant of the Borden company in Brooklyn today and exchanged shots with twenty policemen. The city was expected to reseve 65 per cent. of its normal supply.

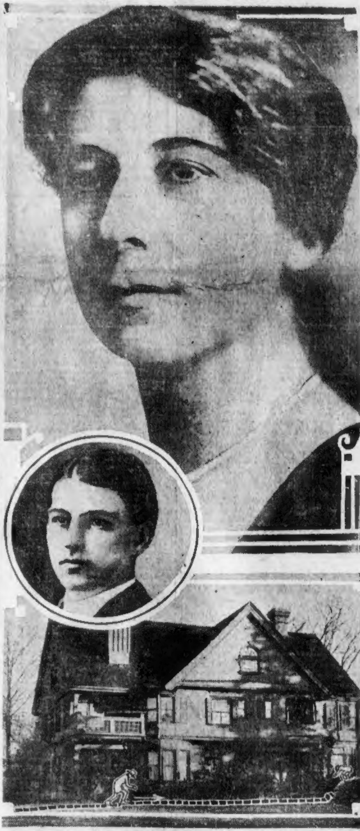
Wife and Professor in Trespassing Case

Her Husband Says He Entered Her Mansion to Seize Letters



Mrs. Walter W. S. Cook, rich Cambridge woman, whose photograph appears, accuses her second husband of visiting her premises by way of a window, as illustrated in the diagram. Her first husband was Profesor Eric Greenfield, whose photograph also appears above.

GETS INTO MANSION THROUGH WINDOW

Accused as Trespasser, Archaeologist Makes Spirited Defence of His Act

Walter W. S. Cook of Harvard, one of the best known of the younger archaeologists of the country, was in Cambridge District Court today, charged with trespassing in the home of Mrs. Harriet B. Cook, his estranged wife, who is wealthy and seven years his senior.

Cook was arrested after a dramatic scene in his wife's home, following the discovery by an alert housekeeper that he had entered by a window.

When he was taken to the police station letters from his wife's former husband, Professor Eric Greenfield of Perdue University, Lafayette, Ind., were found on his person, and he made little secret of the fact that letters and other evidence, as well as his personal property, were what he sought.

Cook defended his course in a spirited public statement in which he accused Mrs. Cook of maintaining friendly relations with Professor Greenfield after her second marriage and said the pofessor and his wife were engaged in a conspiracy to get him out of the family.

He was arraigned before Judge Olcott in Cambridge on a charges of trespassing, waived examination, and was held in $100 for a hearing November 15. Mrs.

HARVARD MAN ADMITS HE SEIZED LETTERS IN HIS WIFE'S HOME

INVADED WOMAN'S MANSION

Cook and her attorney were present, but took no part in the proceedings.

OCCUPIES MANSION.

Cook, who is thirty-three years old, lives at No. 16 Church street, in furnished rooms crowded with books, art treasures and archaelogical specimens. Mrs. Cook lives in a mansion at No. 179 Brattle street, Cambridge, where the archaeologist lived with her until she sued him for divorce last June, charging cruel and abusive treatment.

Cook declared that he would contest his wife's divorce suit and would also prove that he was innocent of actual wrong doing in entering her home.

He said she was denying him his books and clothing in the hope of forcing him to deliver up to her evidence he had secured.

Cook said that he would aim to prove that Professor Greenfield was a caller at his home in Cambridge while he was studying in Europe.

DENIAL BY HUSBAND.

Friends of Mrs. Cook have stated that she took her husband to Europe after their marriage and paid his expenses while he continued his studies.

"That is not true," said the husband, when he was released from jail. "I am a traveling fellow of the American Archaeological Institute. That institute paid my expenses."

He continued that Professor Greenfield had been a source of annoyance to him almost from the time of his marriage to the professor's divorced wife in 1919.

While he was studying in France and Spain, he said, Greenfield visited relatives on Park street, Medford, and was a caller at the Cook home.

In June, 1920, Greenfield again visited the East, and, according to Cook, Mrs. Cook decided on a divorce.

"Greenfield asked me not to contest the suit," said Cook today.

"I have asked my wife for specifications in her divorce suit and failed to get them," he said. "I have asked in vain for books, archaeological specimens and art treasures, which have been held as hostages against the evidence I have collected."

J. D. Crook is Mrs. Cook's attorney in the divorce action and George F. James today appeared as Cook's lawyer.

DIVORCE "SEVERE BLOW."

James declared that his client was a hard-working scientist and artist and the divorce action was a severe blow to him and might hurt his professional career.

Cook, in explaining his case for himself, told interviewers that he would fight his wife's action to the limit, despite her alleged threat to give him undesirable publicity.

Cook was graduated from Harvard with a degree of Bachelor of Arts in 1911. He got his A. M. degree in 1913, and studied in the University of Bonn. He is the son of William J. Cook of Springfield.

Mrs. Cook is the daughter of Mrs. Frances Buck of Utica, N. Y., and has inherited several fortunes.

able to identify either Sacco or Vanzetti, said Moore.

"BASED ON MALICE."

He reiterated his assertion that the verdict returned by the jury was "based far more upon malice and prejudice than by the facts presented in this court. It was an unclean, biased verdict so far as Vanzetti was concerned."

He then proceeded to attack the evidence of the government witnesses one by one, pying special atention to that given by Miss Splaine, an employe of the Slater & Morrill plant, and that of Louis Pelser.

"Nothing the government produced here went to show that Vanzetti was in Braintree on the day of the crime," he declared.

At the conclusion of his argument Moore was followed by District Attorney Frederick G. Katzmann, who was expected to take the remainder of the day in his adress.

Sheriff Capen announced to newspaper men that he is taking no chances and intends to repeat tonight his precautions of the last few days, when he has had the jail guarded all night, and swept by the beams of searchlights.

Homeless children placed by social service agencies with families who promise to care for them are frequently inhumanly treated, according to C. V. He declared that social service agencies are "too apt to congratulate themselves upon their accomplishments and ignore their failures."

PELLETIER SAYS 'I'LL UNMASK ALLEN'

District Attorney Is Ordered to Appear in Supreme Court on November 15

District Attorney Joseph C. Pelletier, replying today to charges of misconduct, contained in a formal application to the Supreme Court for his disbarment, threatened to tear the mask from Attorney-General J. Weston Allen.

He added that General Francis Peabody of Milton, who had been selected to conduct the prosecution for the Bar Association, "has found out that I have the goods on him and quit the job in favor of another of the clique."

The action of the Attorney-General in asking Pelletier's disbarment, which follows the charges and specifications filed by Allen eight days ago requesting Pelletier's removal from office, drew from the district attorney a statement in which he asserts that the whole move by the Bar Association is "more highbrow politics."

CITES VOTERS' DECISION.

"Now that I have started after Allen and those who are handling and directing him, he rushes to the Supreme Court and uses the same charges that Cabot and the Watch and Ward Society tried when they attempted to block me for district attorney, and which the people saw through and rejected.

"I have no reason to fear the Cabots, the Hurlburts, the Peabodys, the Thompsons and the Westons and others even higher up than any of them," said Pelletier.

Following the filing of the application by Allen Judge Pierce of the Supreme Court issued an order directing the district attorney to appear before him on November 15, when time will be set for completion of the pleading and a hearing on the merits of the Attorney-General's allegations in disbarment.

REPEAT CHARGES.

The disbarment charges comprising thirty-two allegations, are almost identical with the thirty-five charges requesting Pelletier's removal as district attorney.

Attorney-General Allen declined to comment on his new petition against Pelletier, and further refused to say who would represent the State when court action is started.

The petition starts off as follows: "J. Weston Allen, Attorney-General, respectfully represents that Joseph C. Pelletier is an attorney, having been duly admitted to the bar of Massachusetts and having practiced for many years in Boston; that said Pelletier has been guilty of misconduct as an attorney-at-law, in various matters, as follows," etc.

Charge 32, the last in the disbarment petition, alleges "that the said Pelletier has misconducted himself in his said office as an attorney-at-law and has violated his oath as such attorney and has failed to conduct himself with all good fidelity as well to the courts as to his clients. Wherefore your petitioner prays this honorable court to remove said Joseph C. Pelletier from the office of attorney."

A noticeable feature of the action against the district attorney is the fact that disbarment is asked before a hearing has been held on the original charges asking for Pelletier's removal from office.

DIFFER FROM TUFTS ACTION.

The present cases against Pelletier are at variance with the action taken against former District Attorney Nathan A. Tufts of Middlesex County, who was removed from office before action was instituted to disbar him.

The disbarment specifications against Pelletier repeat the allegations regarding the Emerson Motors Company case, the Agnes Smith case, the Warren C. Daniel, Dorothy Cote, Merrill W. Shute, Emma Brackett, Elizabeth and Curtis Wilson Emery and Mrs. Jennie Chase cases.

The names of Attorney Daniel H. Coakley and Attorney William J. Corcoran figure in the disbarment petition exactly as they did in the petition for removal.

"MORE HIGHBROW POLITICS."

The District Attorney issued the following statement regarding the disbarment proceedings:

"More highbrow politics.

"Cabot and the Watch and Ward used the same accusations to defeat me for District Attorney. The people saw through them and their game and elected me. Then recognizing the need of a stronger "pull" they got the bar clique to lend a hand, and the clique moulded and upholstered the charges until I got ready to run for Mayor.

"Then they fixed up the charges and handed them to Attorney General Allen with instructions to use them to sandbag my candidacy for Mayor. That did not work. That game was too transparent, because Allen held them up his sleeve until my candidacy was announced.

"USES SAME CHARGE."

"Now that I have started after Allen, and those who are handling and directing him, Allen rushes to the Supreme Court and uses the same charges as a means of getting me disbarred. Allen knows now that I am going to tear his mask off, and if he thinks that he can muzzle or terrify me, he is mistaken.

"Hurlburt, president of the Bar Association, in addition to his other ponderous enterprises, will have to devise some other scheme to drive me out of this fight for mayor, or to silence me.

"I have no more reason to fear the Hurlburts, the Peabodys, the Thompsons, the Cabots, the Westons, and others higher up than any of them, than the people of this city will have to respect them when I get through with them and their records, past and present. Francis Peabody, who was selected to prosecute me, found out that I had the goods on him, and he quit the job in favor of another of the clique.

"As Allen well knew, when he filed these charges at closing time of the court, I am leaving for Chicago to attend a national reception by the Knights of Columbus to General Foch, and must defer until my return further comment in the matter.

'In the meantime, perhaps the Attorney-General will find time to answer the few questions I put to him Wednesday night about his overdrawn bank account, his candidacy for Governor, the treasury from which his stool-pigeons have been paid, etc."

ESSEX COUNTY PROBE ASKED IN MARBLEHEAD

Marblehead, Nov. 5.—At the monthly meeting of the Essex County Associated Boards of Trade, held here, a motion was passed calling upon District Attorney S. H. Donnell to investigate the administration of the county affairs of the Essex County Commissioners. This motion is the result of considerable criticism of the commissioners, in certain charges made at a meeting held a few days ago in Salem. The commissioners in question are John M. Grosvernor, Jr., James C. Poor and Benjamin B. Gilman. It is said that the district attorney will start an investimation in a few days.

Taunton, Nov. 5. — With tears streaming down his face Peter Souci, thirty-four years old, of Pawtucket, told Judge Austin in the District Court here, that he was only the tool of the two taxi men who robbed Wilfred Vandreuil of Marieville, R. I., at the point of a revolver in the town of Seekonk on the morning of October 28 last. He told a straightforward story of his part in the robbery, claiming he was drunk and never saw the two taxi men before that morning. He was held in $800 bonds for the Grand Jury.

WOMAN STABS ASSAILANT WITH HATPIN

Routs Man Who Attempted to Attack Her on Lonely Haverhill Road

Haverhill, Nov. 5.—Residents of the Old Chadwick road section are planning to patrol the vicinity tonight to protect women against the strange young man who attacked Mrs. Edith Graville while she was on her way home, but was driven off by a stab from her long hatpin.

Mrs. Graville reported to the police that as she passed a clump of bushes at a bend of the road a man, apparently between 18 and 20 years old, and well dressed, leapd at her.

She says she jumped back, and pulled from her hat the pin she was wearing. As her assailant came at her she thrust at him with the point, and jabbed it deep into his stomach.

He screamed with pain, dropped to the ground and rolled about in the leaves and mud for a moment, then leaped to his feet and fled.

Mrs. Graville hurried to a telephone and notified the police, who sent Motorcycle Officer Wholley from headquarters. When the policeman reached the vicinity of the attack he was unable to find any trace of Mrs. Graville's assailant.

A number of other women who have been approached by a strange man, answering the description of the one who attempted to assault Mrs. Graville, have reported their experiences to the police.

The residents of the district are determined to put a stop to the annoyance.

Salesmen of the company showed him, he declared, statistics of the earnings of various banks, together with a picture of the "main banking room" of the company. Actually, Jones declares, the company's chief or sole business is lending money on securities.

Tells of Temptations and Danger to Which Dry Agents Are Exposed

By International News Service.

Washington, Nov. 5.—Bootleggers' plots to corrupt dry law officials with bribes and thus tear down the morale of the federal enforcement machine were officially disclosed today by Prohibition Commissioner Haynes.

Failing in their efforts to "buy" dry agents or officials, illicit liquor promoters then inaugurate reigns of terror that culminate in the killing or serious maiming of Federal agents, Haynes declared.

"They shoot dry agents down like dogs," Haynes said.

"Bootleggers and moonshiners repeatedly set traps for them. Stills or bootleg stores are protected with high voltage electrical devices."

Prohibition agents are almost daily being tempted with cash bribes, in some instances running as high as five times the amount of their annual salary, the commissioner said. Mr. Haynes charged that some of the leading bootleggers of the country are "men of wealth and influence," who systematically try to seduce and corrupt government agents.

"In New York recently two of our agents turned down an offer of $50,000 each with promise of double those sums, merely to O. K. permits authorizing withdrawal of whiskey from bonded warehouses," he said.

Commissioner Haynes' official list of fatalities among Volstead law operatives included these names:

Kirby Frans, fatally shot, dismantling a still at Perry, Okla.; C. A. Wood and S. E. Beckett, killed at Midland, Texas, by bootleggers; Stanton Weiss, killed by bootleggers in Logan County, Okla., and Joe Kolb, fatally shot from ambush, near Huntsville, Ala.

Haynes said in some sections of the West bootleggers were using dynamite to frighten or kill dry agents. Recently he said a dry law squad narrowly escaped death in Colorado from such a plot.

Dry Agents Are Urged to Defend Themselves

By Associated Press.

Washington, Nov. 5.—Prohibition agents, in the opinion of the board of temperance, prohibition and public morals of the Methodist Episcopal Church, "should be instructed to remember their wives, children and the people of the United States when their lives are placed in danger by bootleggers or moonshiners."

"Some people seem to be surprised that the Board of Temperance of the Methodist Episcopal Church should suggest that prohibition officers have a right to defend themselves quickly and effectively when threatened by armed criminals," the board said in a statement issued today.

"The cries of bereft children of faithful prohibition officers rise to heaven," the statement continued. "It is nothing less than murderous to expect prohibition officers to await the fire of bootleggers with guns in their hands."

Worcester, Nov. 5.—The honor of being the first woman to run for councilman, in this city belongs to Mrs. Jeannette L. Perry, widow of Charles B. Wilson Starts to Make Boston Dry

Harold D. Wilson, supervisor of the prohibition field force here, announced today that he was ready at last to "get really down to business and make Boston 'dry.'"

He will start the first of the week, going out into his territory himself and directing the agents of his department.

The law will be rigidly enforced, so far as is humanly possible, and open selling of spirits in the city will be fraught with much danger, he said.

Supervisor Wilson said today that he had not discharged any more of his agents and did not propose to do so immediately.

He released six men yesterday after a statement in which he told of the discovery of grafting and disloyalty among some of the "hold-overs" from the regime of William J. McCarthy, his predecessor.

FOCH TO MARCH WITH 40,000 KNIGHTS

Marshal in Chicago Lays Wreath on Statue of Lincoln and Gets Degree

By Associated Press.

Chicago, Nov. 5.—Two days crowded with festivities in honor of Marshal Foch began with the allied chieftain's arrival today, accompanied by General Pershing.

A cavalry escort, a delegation from the American Legion and military officers were awaiting Marshal Foch at the station.

The marshal and his party were taken in automobiles to Grant Park where Governor Small, Mayor Thompson, and a party of State officials gave him an official welcome, while the First Field Artillery, Illinois National Guard, greeted him with a salute of nineteen guns.

At the University of Chicago, the marshal received the honorary degree of LL. D.

The feature of the afternoon's program was the laying of a wreath upon the statue of Abraham Lincoln. Two thousand Legion men and 5,000 school children formed lines to the statue through which Marshal Foch passed as he went to pay this tribute.

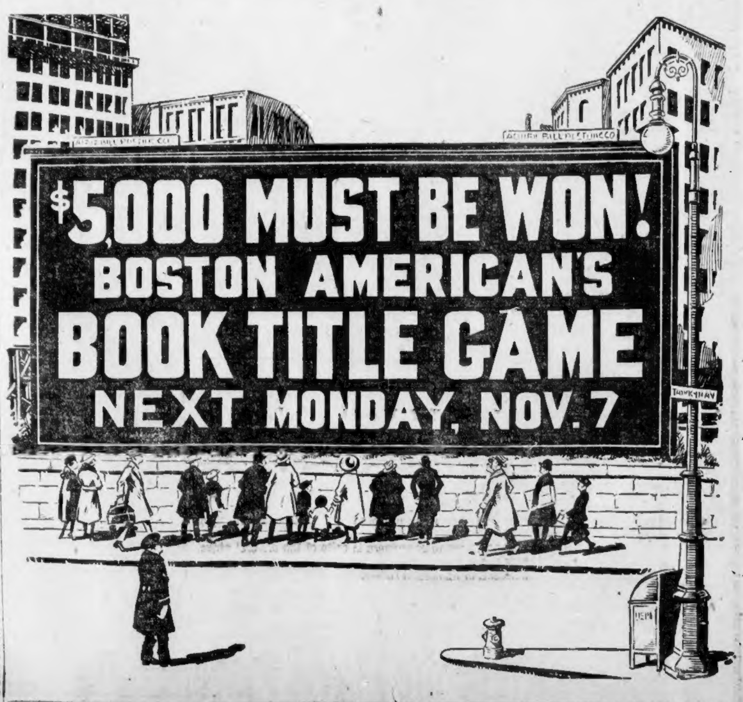
Tomorrow the Knights of Columbus have charge of the marshal's program. At 1 o'clock 40,000 Knights of Columbus and 60,000 members of the Polish, Bohemian and French Catholic societies are to form in line with Marshal Foch, Brigadier-General W. D. O'Connor, Supreme Knight James A. Flaherty and Mayor Thompson in automobiles leading them.

HUNTING FOR MISSING DEDHAM MAIL POUCH

Acting Inspector William Plath of the Postoffice Department today denied that there were checks valued at $20,000 in the mail pouch which was lost on October 15, somewhere between Boston and Dedham. According to Inspector Plath the pouch contained a bundle of cancelled checks and a letter containing three dollars in money. It was a complaint relative to the non-delivery of the letter containing the three dollars that led to the discovery of the loss of the pouch. Postal officials now believe that the missing pouch reached the South Station and that it was lost either in the station or from a motor truck on the way from the station to the postoffice.

YOUTH PAROLED FOR LODGING HOUSE THEFT

Rupert Sherburne, twenty-four years old, of Corning street, South End, was arrested as he was leaving the house today, charged with the theft of a $44 cornet and $17 from the lodging house at No. 34 Fayette street, kept by Rosella Beckair. When arraigned in the Municipal Court, before Judge Bennett, it was shown that each week since the robbery he had been sending $3 or $4 to the woman in an effort to make restitution. Judge Bennett gave him a month in the House of Correction, suspended sentence and placed him on probation until May 4.



FRANCES STUART MURPHY, DESERTED AND ALONE, SEEKS A JOB

NOTORIETY BLIGHTS CHANCES

"I can now sympathize with Evelyn Nesbit Thaw. I know what it means to be deserted and alone in the world with nothing but your wrongs to keep you company.

"I know what it means to have people look at me on the street and arch their eyebrows as they pass, and whisper things about me when I am out of earshot. I know what it means to be 'a woman with a past,' with no friends, no job—nothing but hardship and want staring me in the face—that is if I want to be straight."

With her hopes for the future shattered, her husband and friends departed, with poverty reaching out its hand to grasp her, Frances Stuart Murphy, one-time film star, whose husband has just obtained a divorce, sat in the apartment of her one remaining friend and thus bewailed her fate.

She had spent a day hunting for a job. But it had been a heart-breaking day; a day of disappointments. No one wanted her and as she sat in the apartment of her friend the realization of what is apparently in store came home to her as it never had before.

DESERTED BY FRIENDS.

With no home and no money and no prospect of procuring a position, the woman who played opposite the great Caruso in the movies was bitter.

"It is the women who seem the hardest," said Mrs. Murphy. "They are just like a lot of hens. When one becomes sick or crippled the healthy ones immediately begin to pick her.

"Women I thought were friends have now turned on me, and look on me as something to be scorned. And some of these very women are rotten to the core. But because my wrongdoings have been made public while they have managed to conceal theirs from their husbands and friends, they think they are on a higher plane than I.

"It is a hard proposition; this of hunting for work when you have a past. A woman does not have a chance in this world if she has made a slip. It is not right. It is not just.

DOUBLE STANDARD.

"Why should the men be allowed to sin and still maintain their social and business standing, while women are cast out at the first slip? It is the old question of the double standard.

"A man is a man. He is unfaithful to his wife. She forgives him because he is a man, and for centuries it has been the custom for men to sin if they can find a pretty woman who will fall.

"But while the man is forgiven and mingles with the best of the world's society, the woman who fell with him is cast out. Her reputation is gone and there is but one thing left for her to do.

"I have tried to get into several Boston hospitals. I wanted to train to become a nurse. Would they have me? I should say not. Simply because I am Frances Murphy. They demanded at least two excellent recommendations. I cannot get them, so I cannot become a nurse. In their eyes I am not good enough.

PAID DEARLY.

"God knows I have paid dearly for my wrongs. I want to put them behind me and work for my living. But they won't give me a chance. Like Evelyn Nesbit I have a past, and cannot bury it like a man.

"I have tried to obtain employment as a milliner. I was refused. I have tried to get employment as a clerk. I was refused. I have tried to get a job as a manicurist. I was refused. Why? Because I am Francis Murphy.

"The world of work has closed its doors to me. The mere fact that I must live—must earn my daily bread—does not matter to those who look down on me."

With a sob, Mrs. Murphy then spoke of her parents and her home back in Iowa.

"I can't even go back to my father and mother," she said. "Not that they would not welcome me and take me in. But the story of my wrongs has been told there, and the tongue of gossip are wagging like threshing machines. It is a small town where my parents live, and if I go back I shall bring nothing but unhappiness to my parents. That I shall never do.

"What I want is work. I do not want to go back to the motion pictures. There is money there. I could probably get a position. But I do not want that. I want to really and truly work. I want to close my past as I would an unpleasant book.

"There is nothing in this easy stuff. It only leads a girl into the wrong paths—the paths that carry her to ruin and suffering and disgrace."

"I love fine clothes. But if they come too easy they do one harm. I have come to the conclusion that work is the cure for a broken heart. And I have the broken heart and want to work and forget.

STILL LOVES HUSBAND.

"When I lost my husband it was a great blow to me. I had not realized just what it would mean. I do now, for I still love my husband. I have cried night after night over losing him. But the crying came too late. I would be willing to cry all the rest of my life if I could only get him back. I can never forget him. He was so good, so wonderful.

"Oh, if I could only live the last three years over again! They would be a different three years. The name of Frances Stuart Murphy would never be spoken in the courtroom, would never appear across the pages of the newspapers. But it is too late. All I can do now is brace up and fight.

"And fight I will. While I am broken-hearted now, I shall not allow myself to be downed by my adversities. I shall stay right here in Boston, and if I can break down the barrier that is now confronting me on every side, I shall make good—by work.

Chicago Opera Star Who Declares Bobbed Hair Is Not Becoming

LINA CAVALIERI

Chicago, Nov. 5.—No bobbed hair for Lina Cavalieri. She said so when she arrived with her husband, Lucien Murator, ready for their engagement with the Chicago Grand Opera Company.

"It is not becoming," she said. "No matter who wears their hair that way, even Mary Garden, and I'm not going to cut mine. It looks much better as it is."

When Mary Garden arrived from Europe recently to take her place as director of the opera her hair had been bobbed. She explained she had it cut because bobbed hair didn't require so much attention.

They were arrested some days ago in connection with the methods used in promoting stock of the North Shore Fish Corporation. The three waived examination today, although it had been expected they would ask for a hearing, and were held in $500, pending the action of the Grand Jury.

The three defendants awaiting Grand Jury action are well known, Stone being a prominent lawyer here and Bridgham having been city solicitor of Bath, Me.

SERGEANT HELD IN JITNEY VICE RING PROBE

Fall River Alderman Admits Being on Party to Resorts at Police Hearing

Fall River, Nov. 5.—Admission by Alderman Harry Monks that he had been with a party on a tour of resorts in New Bedford, was one of the sensations of the five-hour hearing of charges of conduct unbecoming an officer, preferred against Police Sergeant Daniel Killeen in connection with the jitney vice ring probe.

The Board of Police heard many witnesses against Killeen and reserved its decision. After the hearing he was arrested on charges of obstructing justice and inciting perjury. The cases were continued and he was held under bonds of $2,000.

APPROACHED BY OFFICER.

Alderman Monks, who ran for Mayor a year ago and is a candidate for re-election, testified that he had been asked by Kileen why he had not done his best so that Manuel Travis, a jitney driver, could get back his license which had been suspended by the Board of Aldermen. He later reported the incident to the Board of Police.

It was in the machine operated by Travis that the Alderman made the trip to New Bedford, it was brought out by the testimony of Monks. The Alderman told of visits to several resorts and of winding up at the Waverly House. He denied knowledge of any evil reputation of the places visited.

Mr. Monks admitted that there were three or four women in the party and then denied that there were any any.

ST. PETER GIRL "KIDNAPED."

Another sensation was provided when counsel for Rose St. Peter, the witness who vanished during the trials of the sixteen jitney men, and was recently arrested on her return to the city, declared that the girl had been kidnaped and that she had been unable to escape a woman guard in a Canadian city until the day of her return.

The St. Peter girl was ordered to furnish sureties of $1,000 as a witness in the Travis case. She is under a charge of contempt of court and was ordered to furnish sureties of $100 for trial on November 15.

SCHOONER IS BLOWN ASHORE AT NANTASKET

Heavy Gale Forces the Gladys M. Taylor, With Cargo of Coal, Onto Shoals

By Associated Press.

Vineyard Haven, Nov. 5.—The four-masted schooner Gladys M. Taylor was blown ashore on the shoals southeast of Cross Rip in Nantucket Sound today.

The westerly gale made her position an uneasy one, but it was believed by coast guards that the schooner could weather the storm until the coast guard cutter Acushnet reached her side. She was resting on a sandy bottom.

The Gladys M. Taylor, a vessel of 900 tons, was bound with coal from New York for Calais.

The schooner Isabel C. Harriss, Norfolk for Bangor, was towed here by the Acushnet today, disabled by loss of sails and other damage sustained in a northeast gale off Cape Cod on November 2.

SECOND DEGREE VERDICT FOR MRS. SOUTHARD

Alleged Poisoner of Four Husbands Accepts Fate Without Emotion

Twin Falls, Idaho, Nov. 5.—Following a sensational trial as an alleged "female Bluebeard," slayer of husbands, Mrs. Lydia Southard was convicted here of murder in the second degree in connection with the death of her fourth husband, Edward Meyers.

The convicted woman sat without a sign of emotion as the verdict was reported, and the only show of feeling in the family was exhibited by Paul V. Southard, her fifth and present husband, who is a petty officer in the navy.

While she was on trial only for the slaying of her fourth husband, Meyers, it was charged openly by the State that she poisoned her first three helpmates by poisoning them with arsenic which she obtained from fly-paper.

In the course of her trial it was testified that "she swept men off their feet into matrimony," then tired of them and made away with them.

Mrs. Southard stubbornly protested her innocence and declared she would be acquitted and vindicated. Notwithstanding her stony calm when the verdict was announced it was a severe blow to her.

Mrs. Southard's first three husbands were Robert Dooley, William McHaffie and Harlem Lewis.

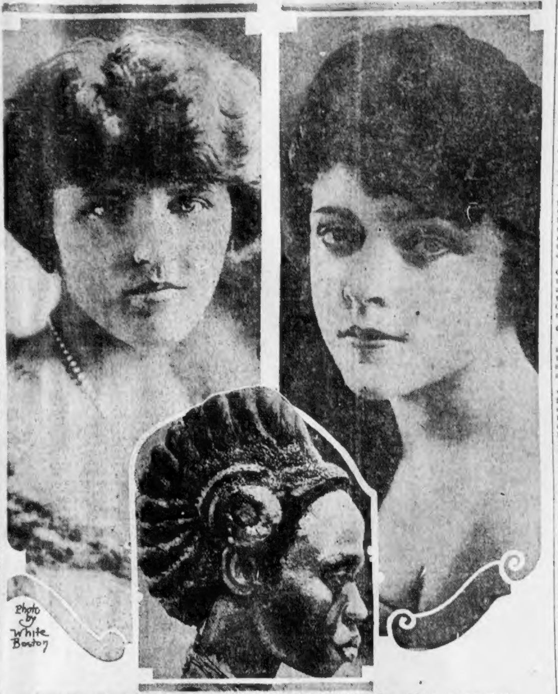
Boston Woman Denies Professor's Slur on Yankee Girls' Beauty



LIBERIAN BELLE AND TWO OF NEW ENGLAND'S FAIREST

The dusky African beauty shown is the type chosen by Professor Starr of the University of Chicago. Above, at left, is Mrs. Walter Tufts, Jr., and beside her Mrs. Lotty C. Seimmon, who were respectively first and second prize-winners in the Boston American's Loveliest Girl contest.

Placing of African Belles Before Fair Ones at Home Is Absurd, Mrs. Tupper Says

By HAZEL CANNING

Professor Starr of the University of Chicago may tell his pupils that there are no beautiful women in the United States—and get off without censure. But he'd just better not try to tell this to anybody except his pupils.

Professor Starr may be a great anthropologist, but, when he comes to remarking that "beauty is only found among the Liberian and other African races"—why—then—he'd better get ready to run, if he is speaking to anybody in Boston.

And if, perchance, the learned professor should address such opinions to Mrs. Frank Boyce Tupper, Durant campaign chairman, Boston clubwoman and lecturer, he'd better have all his arguments ready.

And then he'd find they carried no weight with her, for Mrs. Tupper right away would dispose of all Professor Starr's preferences for the noble, savage, brown lady, with three short words of an old New England phrase.

"Stuff and nonsense!" would be what Mrs. Tupper would say to the professor. "Stuff and nonsense!"

That's about the reception Professor Starr's recent rather striking assertion would meet almost anywhere in Boston. Here's how he came to his conclusions.

"NO BEAUTIFUL WOMEN."

Professor Starr recently returned from a visit to Africa, studying his subject — anthropology. He had hardly arrived home when, to a class of young men and women students of the University of Chicago he remarked, all out of a clear sky, that "there are no beautiful women in the United States. It is only our American good humor which makes us call a girl pretty who is not phenomenally ugly.

"A handsome man or woman is the rarest of all creatures," the professor went on. "Only among the Liberian races is real beauty to be found. Beauty in a blonde race is impossible."

He opened his mouth, and so spake he. Now just listen to Mrs. Tupper. "Very edifying, isn't it?" asks the Boston clubwoman, first of all. "It causes us to wonder what are the learned gentleman's qualifications for making such connoisseur's statements. What beauty college did he graduate from, and when did he take his beauty Ph.D.? Really, it's foolish to become vexed with the funny man, because we all can see first off that he's talking to make those students of his in that perhaps tedious classroom open their eyes.

"As a serious proposition, of course, we all know Professor Starr's latest is a joke. For, if we are to discuss the matter academically, first of all we must define beauty. What is beauty?

WOMAN DEFINES BEAUTY.

"Beauty is real intelligence, spreading its sweetness and its light over the face of the beautiful person. Beauty is strength and fineness of spirit, reflected in the features of the beautiful man or woman. Beauty, besides, is wholesome strength, fine health, trimness of body and of limb. Beauty is the right adjustment of body and mind to each other and to the world.

"Judged by these standards, what shown in a beauty contest has Professor Starr's naked negro girl, chasing her crocodiles by the banks of her malarial African river? Judged by such standards, what chance has that young savage maid, her nose ring dangling, in any company of beautiful girls, where tutored mind and civilized spirit interpret their strength and their kindliness through clear blue eyes and complexion, pink and white and clean and cared for?

"If there are no beautiful American woman, why, then, do artists all over the world seek the American girl as a model before all other races?

CITES OUR WOMEN'S CHARM.

"If there are no beautiful American girls, then why are American women set apart among all nations for their dash and charm and goodness to look upon? Professor Starr is barking up the very wrongest tree this time. But then it is really foolish to answer him, because I don't believe he expected anyone to take any notice of him.

"This beautiful Liberian maid whom he extolled is about all things, I should say, that a beautiful woman should not be. She is uneducated; education should count when beauty is reckoned. She does not know how to preserve what beauty she has; she knows nothing of hygiene, of fit physical exercises to keep her in trim; and, all too soon, she becomes an old, worn woman.

"But see the way our American women wear, on the other hand. Beauty is as beauty does, in the last analysis.

"Beautiful women in America rest not alone on their beauty. If beautiful women in America are not worth more than a ring in their nose or a brass stomacher, then they're ugly, no matter how regular their features. But, as I said before, let the professor talk on. Probably it amuses him."

Judge Files Case When Oxford Residents Vouch for Character of Accused Woman

Worcester, Nov. 5.—Oxford residents are highly pleased at the decision of Superior Court to file the case in which Electrae G. Boyce of Oxford is charged with polygamy.

They were present, among them town officials, to testify to the good character of the defendant and even told the judge they would take her into their homes and care for her until such time as she can remarry her second husband, Elmer Eager of Oxford.

Here is the story as it was unfolded in court:

Mrs. Boyce's first husband was George Boyce of Westboro whom he left fourteen years ago, going to Oxford, where she entered the employ of her second husband as housekeeper.

Life was going smoothly for all when one of Eager's sons, who had been brought up by Mrs. Boyce, found out that she had been previously married and had not been divorced and for property rights and other reasons caused the arrest of Mrs. Boyce for polygamy.

Boyce a short time ago obtained a divorce. As soon as the legal time elapses, Mrs. Boyce intends to again marry Mr. Eager.

SAYS HUSBAND HUGGED HER COUSIN

Worcester Wife, Suing for Separation, Makes Charges Against Goodman

Worcester, Nov. 5.—"One night I was awakened by my brother who asked me to look into the room occupied by my husband. I did. With my husband, his arms around her, was my own second cousin, a nurse, Jessie Kessler."

This is the statement made in Probate Court by Mrs Yetta Goodman, wife of Harry Goodman, a fashionable women's tailor with a shop in the Slater Arcade. Mrs. Goodman is suing for separate support. The Goodmans are very prominent in social circles in Worcester.

Mrs. Goodman told Judge Frederick Chamberlain that Goodman brought the Kessler woman to their home as a nurse when he was sick and that she remained there against Mrs. Goodman's wishes for about six months.

CHARGES THREAT TO KILL.

She said that Goodman frequently accused her of being jealous. Every time she remonstrated with him she said he told her, "You're jealous again."

She said he was "actually wild" when he came home one night to find Rabbi Bienenfeld and some other prominent Hebrews in the house for the purpose of effecting a reconciliation between him and his wife. He became angry when his mother insisted that he should return his wife's mink coat, it was alleged.

Mrs. Goodman testified that Goodman said "I am not going to give her a $3,000 coat if I am not going to live with her." His mother told him, witness said, that he had already given it to her and it belonged to her.

Then Goodman's mother fainted, the rabbi went home and there was a first class row. It was then, she testified, that Goodman threatened to kill her "like a dog" and called her vile names.

Goodman testified that the first trouble he had with his wife took place in 1915 and that he had to move from his home on Providence street because a man named Harry Socolow was continually visiting his house.

TERRORIZED BY GUN.

He said he moved to Lake Quinsigamond, five miles away. He said after that his wife threatened to kill both himself and herself and had to call Dr. James Nightingale to pacify her.

Gibson, a automobile salesman, said he took Goodman to Boston while demonstrating a car and that they "picked up" a woman named Mrs. Ruth Kindler, a widow, in Boston, and gave her a ride. Miss Martha Burwick told of seeing Goodman and Mrs. Kinder in Boston, and Max Kurzman, a theatre usher, told of seeing them together at a Worcester theatre.

Mrs. Kinder admitted she was autoing with Goodman, that he gave her a ring and allowed her to use a sealskin coat from his store. She said he always carried a revolver and terrorized her by telling her if he ever saw her with another man he would kill her. She said she advised him to go back to his wife.

The hearing will be continued next Wednesday, and another crowded courtroom is expected.

$24,000 FUND IS GIVEN TO MRS. CUNEO

Deed of Trust Presented to Widow of Slain Police Officer by Curtis

By BERT FORD.

Mrs. Winifred M. Cuneo of No. 46 Everdean street, Dorchester, widow of Patrolman Andrew B. Cuneo, who was murdered while in the performance of his duty, was presented yesterday with a deed of trust for the $24,000 fund raised by the Boston American for her and her nine children.

The presentation was made at noon at police headquarters by Police Commissioner Edwin U. Curtis, whose active support, with that of Superintendent Crowley and the department as a whole, was largely responsible for the success of the undertaking.

Former Mayor John F. Fitzgerald, A. C. Ratshesky, president of the United States Trust Company, and Allen R. Frederick, who made up a sub-committee of the Boston American Cuneo Fund Committee, witnessed the brief, but touching little ceremony, while clerks looked on from adjoining offices.

INCOME FOR LIFE.

Mrs. Cuneo, in deep mourning, controlled her emotion with difficulty. Her lips quivered and her hand trembled as she received from Commissioner Curtis the precious document which insures her and her family against want for life and which was made possible by the sympathy, generosity and the fine public spirit of the people of Greater Boston.

It was not until Mrs. Cuneo tried to express her gratitude to all that she broke down and wept. She was accompanied by one of her sons. The formalities which lifted a mortgage and banished threatened poverty from the home of the martyred policeman was over in a minute or two, but big principles were involved in that little scene at headquarters.

CURTIS THANKS AMERICAN.

It meant that the Boston public was standing back of its police force and was quick to recognize and reward the bravery and sacrifice of its members. The moral lesson back of the Cuneo Fund is summed up in the following letter which Police Commissioner Curtis sent today to the Boston American:

City of Boston.
Police Department.
November 5, 1921.

"Editor Boston American:

"Dear Sir—The Cuneo Fund collected through the Boston American, having been turned over to the Old Colony Trust Company to hold and invest for the benefit of the widow and children of the late Andrew B. Cuneo, I take pleasure in expressing, in behalf of the committee, its appreciation of the successful efforts of the Boston American to provide for the family of this brave police officer who was killed in the performance of his duty.

"The fund contributed by the public is an assurance to all police officers that should death come to them while in the performance of their duty, the people of this community, grateful for the protection given to their lives and property, will generously come to the assistance of the bereaved families and that some one will always be ready to take the necessary initiative, as in this instance was done by the Boston American, with a result beyond the expectations of the committee.

"Very truly yours,
"E. U. CURTIS.
"Police Commissioner."

Mr. Ratshesky and Mr. Fitzgerald told Mrs. Cuneo about the valiant service rendered by Commissioner Curtis and by the Boston American. This brought more thanks.

TERMS OF DEED OF TRUST.

By the terms of the deed of trust the Old Colony Trust Company agrees to act as trustee, free of charge, and "to manage, invest and re-invest the trust fund so created; to collect the income therefrom and to pay the same from time to time to Winifred M. Cuneo, widow of Andrew B. Cuneo, so long as she shall live and shall remain unmarried.

"Upon the death of said Winifred M. Cuneo, said income from time to time shall be paid over to and shall be distributed among the children of Andrew B. Cuneo and Winifred M. Cuneo, and the issue of any of them deceased, by right of representation, until the youngest of said children to attain the age of twenty-one years, shall attain that age.

"In the event of the re-marriage of said Winifred M. Cuneo, one-quarter of the said income from time to time shall be paid to her so long as she shall live; and the balance of said income shall be paid to and distributed among the children and their issue by right of representation as aforesaid.

"When the youngest of said children to attain the age of twenty-one, shall attain that age, if said Winifred M. Cuneo then shall be deceased—or subsequently upon her decease—the principal of the trust fund, as then constituted, shall be paid to and distributed among the said children and issue of them by right of representation, and thereupon the trust shall terminate."

The baby of the Cuneo family is Henry, aged fourteen months. Then there is Marie Louise, five; Edward, eight; Harold, ten; Winifred, twelve; Andrew J. fourteen; Eleanor, sixteen; Dennis, seventeen, and John, aged nineteen.

Patrolman Cuneo, a faithful and efficient member of the police force for twenty years, was slain at noon on Saturday, August 13, in Hanover street, directly opposite the police station, while trying to disarm Philip F. Whelan, a former Boston policeman who boasted that he was on his way to the State House to demand payment of his naval bonus. Whelan is awaiting trial for first degree murder. He is the father of several children whose mother is dead. Cuneo probably saved the lives of State officials by his sacrifice.

In three weeks the Boston American raised a total of $24,006.29 for his stricken family. It proved to be the largest fund ever raised by a New England newspaper. The receipts averaged better than $1,000 a day, establishing a record.

The committee advanced $250 to Mrs. Cuneo to meet funeral and other urgent expenses, reducing the total to $23,756.29, a check for which sum was turned over to the Old Colony Trust Co. on Thursday by Messrs. Ratshesky and Frederick.

LATE DONATIONS.

After the Boston American fund had closed four donations aggregating $25 were received and never publicly acknowledged until today. These four checks were turned over with the large check to the Old Colony Trust Co. The tardy subscribers were Frank W. Wyman, No. 131 Tremont street, $10; law firm of Bloomfield & Bloomfield, No. 6 Beacon street, $10; Emeline G. Hall, No. 7 Grove street, Winchester, $10, and Percy A. Legge, No. 185 Summer street, $5.

The Boston American Cuneo Fund Committee was made up of Police Commissioner Edwin U. Curtis, former Mayor John F. Fitzgerald, Allen R. Frederick of Piscopo & Frederick, No. 193 Hanover street; Frank W. Stearns, head of the R. H. Stearns Company; alen L. Stone of Hayden, Stone & Co., bankers; A. C. Ratshesky, president of the United States Trust Company; Andrew A. Badaracco, vice-president and trustee of Columbus Savings Bank; Joseph H. O'Neil, president Federal Trust Company; John A. Scanga, commander North End Post, No. 82, American Legion; Vincent Brogna, an attorney; Charles A. Pastone, president P. Pastene & Co., and Robert C. McCabe, managing editor of the Boston American.

GETS $600 PENSION.

The active work of the committee and major task was borne by Messrs. Fitzgerald, Frederick and Badaracco. They devoted their entire time to the cause.

In addition to the Boston American Fund, the Boston City Council voted a pension to Cuneo's family of $600 annually and an outright cash award of $1,000, which was divided equally between the widow and her children.

LATE PATROLMAN CUNEO.

Mrs. Cuneo Grateful

The following letter of thanks was received from Mrs. Cuneo:

Nov. 4, 1921

Editor Boston American,
Dear Sir:

I cannot find words to express the feelings that are in my heart. I wish to thank all the good and generous people who gave so liberally of their sympathy and their funds. The kindness and interest of the Boston Police Department and its officials from Commissioner Curtis and Superintendent Crowley down, I shall never forget.

I desire especially to give thanks to the Boston American for its humane interest in my poor husband's death and his family. I offer thanks to its management on behalf of myself and my children.

"To the general public I wish to say that they have lightened my burden and lessened my grief. May God bless you all. I shall use the fund to educate my children and to make them good citizens and Christians, a credit to their dear father and to their city.

With sincerest gratitude,
WINIFRED M. CUNEO."

TABLET TO BE UNVEILED TO ENDICOTT

The memory of the late Henry B. Endicott, State Food Administrator during the World War, is to be perpetuated with the unveiling of a bas-relief tablet in the State House.

Superintendent of Buildings Fred H. Kimball is completing plans. No date has been set for the unveiling. Henry H. Kitson, Boston sculptor, has made the tablet.

The following tribute is inscribed:

"In a season of great national emergency and civic stress, a leader of the home army, he placed his exceptional abilities, his energies, his life, at the service of the State.

"By his example and influence he inspired his fellow-men to supreme effort in behalf of country, of principle and of right. In grateful and loving tribute to his memory, this tablet is placed by the Commonwealth of Massachusetts."

Members of his family and former associates will be present at the dedication. The Legislature appropriated $400 for such a tablet.

IN FIGHT TO STAY, SAYS BAXTER

Charles Sidney Baxter, former mayor of Medford, and campaign manager for Former Governor Samuel W. McCall, declares himself in the mayoralty fight to stay.

"It has been called to my attention that Mr. Murphy in his speech at Charlestown Thursday night, took occasion to say that I was one of the managers of Mr. Curley's campaign four years ago," said Mr. Baxter.

"I want the citizens of Boston to distinctly understand that I have not now, and never have had any political or other relations with Mr. Curley whatsoever. I am in this campaign and I am in it to the end because I believe I shall be elected mayor of Boston. I think that our citizens are sick and tired of partisan politicians and would like to have a sane business administration of Boston's affairs.

"I do not appear before the people seeking recognition, vindication or resurrection. Mr. Murphy enters Boston politics as a candidate for elective office after fifteen years. His first public utterances show that he is the same bitter, partisan Democratic ward politician that he was in the old days.

What the Boston Transcript
Says About
H. G. WELLS

THE CONFERENCE AND LITERATURE

There is at least a strong chance that posterity will be more interested in the reporters of the Washington Conference than in its principals * * * *

From the other side of the ocean there come to us as reporters such men as H. G. Wells * * * *

At all events, and even without the two last named, we may say that an occasion which is graced by the attendance of H. G. Wells is made by that circumstance noteworthy.

Mr. Wells is one of the foremost figures in the literature of the day, and all may muse expectantly upon the nature of the contribution to future letters in which his observations at Washington will result.

The distinguished men of letters who are coming to the Conference have the chance of their lives. Let us hope that they will rise to it.

2 NEAR DEATH AS TRUCK RUNS INTO CANAL

Methuen Men Make Mistake in Locality on Driving Home From Lawrence

Lawrence, Nov. 5.—William Whitwam and Norman Atkinson of Annis street, Methuen, narrowly escaped death today when their automobile truck crashed through an iron fence and toppled headlong into the South Canal, near the Central bridge.

The two men are partners in a fish business here and were returning home shortly after 1 a. m. when the accident occurred. Atkinson mistook the Boston and Maine railroad bridge for the central bridge, he says, and, in the darkness, headed directly into the iron railing that fences the South Canal.

The truck went through the railing and shot headlong into the canal. The front of the truck buried itself in the mud and only the rear end remained sticking up out of the water.

Patrolmen Sullivan and Shikrallah and two residents of Broadway, Bert M. Worthing and Clinton Stevens, hearing the crash, rushed to the scene. There they found one man struggling in the water and the other pinned in the seat with just his head sticking out of the water. Ropes were procured and the two men rescued.

AUTO BANDITS ROB OIL AGENT IN ROXBURY

Armed Trio Rifle Cash Box of Gasoline Station in Factory District

The third daring holdup by auto bandits and robbery within thirty-six hours in Boston occurred when three armed bandits held up and robbed Francis P. Madeau in his United Oil Company gasoline station at No. 965 Massachusetts avenue, Roxbury.

The three rifled the cash box of $30 then made their escape in an auto. Four men in autos, were involved in the other two holdups.

The station, located in a factory district and on the outskirts, provided an ideal setting for the gunmen, and reduced to a minimum chances of being caught.

Madeau threw up his hands when confronted with the guns. The men wasted no time, rifled the cash box of $30, and escaped. Before the looting was completed one of the trio raced out the door, drove the machine up as the other two camef rom the store, jumped on the running board, and disappeared down the street.

No. one is described as about twenty-three years old, five feet seven inches tall, weighed 150 pounds. He was minus the front teeth in his upper jaw. He wore a gray overcoat and cap.

No. two was about twenty-three years old, five feet nine inches tall, and weight about 160 pounds. He had on a dark suit and cap. He had no overcoat. No description was obtained of the third man.

MANY NEW PLAYS FOR MONDAY

Ruth Chatterton Succeeds Ruth Adams as a Barrie Heroine

Time marches on without pity or remorse, and the time has now come when a new drama by James M. Barrie, with a typical Barrie heroine, is no longer presented by Maud Adams. For very nearly a quarter of a century the gentle Scottish playwright wrought charming, fantastic and whimsical heroines, and Maude Adams, our bewitching American actress, played them better than anybody that Barrie ever found in his own country.

But Miss Adams has waived her rights and Ruth Chatterton, of a younger generation, has stepped into her position. It will be Ruth Chatterton who will present to us "Mary Rose," the girl who was stolen by fairies and came back twenty years afterwards unaged or changed to find all about her bowed with age.

Time has not changed the curious views of Barrie. He still believes in fairies.

The Singing Ditrichstein.

And passing on to the next platform, ladies and gentlemen, we find none other than John Charles Thomas, the nearest thing to a matinee idol that these modern cigarette-smoking, short-skirted girls will permit to exist, and what should John Charles be doing but playing a role originated by Leo Ditrichstein.

"The Love Letter" is a musical rendition of "The Phantom Rival," which was presented here some years ago by Ditrichstein, with Laura Hope Crews as the romantic lady. As far as Boston was concerned, it will be an absolute novelty, for "The Phantom Rival" was one of the most delightful and worst patronized plays which ever visited our fair city.

Looted the "Follies"

Ziegfeld's "Follies" was generously combed of talent in the selection of the cast of principals for "Two Little Girls in Blue," which is coming to the Colonial Theatre next week. Not only the dainty Fairbanks twins, the Tomson twins and Jack Donahue, who contribute so gaily to the fun, have figured importantly in Mr. Ziegfeld's classy review in the last few seasons, but Dorothy Harrison, who plays the small part of a stewardess on the good ship Empress, upon which the action of the musical comedy takes place, is a graduate of the "Follies."

Miss Harrison has a blue-blooded strain, her mother being a Swedish countess, Madame Emilie Alstroms. Her father, though, was an American and hails from North Carolina. He was an F. F. V. and quite as proud of his lineage as his aristocratic wife was of hers. Dorothy decided young in life to hew out a career for herself and appropriate a niche in the hall of fame, so she hied for the stage door. There she was received quite royally and set about her journey with "The Little Blue Devil," a show which not, perhaps, a classic artistically, yet afforded her a stepping stone. From there she switched to vaudeville and was entertaining the patrons of the Keith circuit when she was spied by Mr. Ziegfeld, who lassooed her for the "Follies."

Stars Didn't Shine.

The word has been quietly getting ground that "The Rose Girl" is all unusually agreeable musical comedy, and I confirmed the report by a personal visit. This operetta has had a curious history. It was put out in New York last Spring in an extraordinary fashion. Lydia Lopokova played the leading role. Charles Purcell was the tenor and Michel Fokine himself designed a ballet for Lopokova. Despite these extraordinary features the show went flat.

Now mark what happened. Out went the celebrities and the Fokene embellishments. In went an elongated and indescribably silly person named Fred Hillebrand. Marguerita Lamare, a pretty little unknown with a real voice, assumed the title role. "The Rose Girl" went on the road and audiences, instead of being bored, began to enjoy themselves.

The moral of the above is that a musical show without really funny comedians will not be successful, no matter how pretentious, how artistic and how superbly it may be produced. "The Rose Girl" is first an amusing entertainment, and in addition it is one of the most sumptuously costumed and produced an operetta seen in several years.

English Opera Delivering.

I dropped into the matinee of the Boston Society of Singers, Wednesday, and heard a really remarkable performance of Delibe's "Lakme," a rather unfamiliar but beautiful little opera comique, and one admirably suited for a coloratura soprano.

The score of "Lakme" is not heavy and the Arlington orchestra had enough tone and subtility to perform it very well. The conductor was Frank Waller, an American, who was one of the assistant conductors of the Henry Russell Boston Opera. Waller has come along since those days and now conducts with power and authority. He was responsible for a performance for which no apologies at all were needed.

Clara Shear, the Lakme of the afternoon, was a charming surprise. In appearance and manner she was ideal and her voice proved to be a coloratura of unusual loveliness and brilliancy. Her only fault was a tendency to drive her tone into the nasal passage because of an inadequate mouth opening, but this is a failing which could be easily remedied. Certainly such a voice is rare even in five-dollar opera.

Rulon Robison, the tenor, surprised me by his mastery of the French head tones required by the tenor score of this French operetta. For a completely inexperienced singer, in opera he has travelled far in a few weeks.

Next week the massive "Aida" of Verdi will be the bill at the Arlington. If the Boston Society of Singers can manage an adequate performance of this work as well as the really splendid "Lakme," they deserve congratulations. It was a pleasure to see that the house was crowded at that matinee.

OUR MARY AS THE LITTLE LORD

"Little Lord Fauntleroy," Mary Pickford's newest and best screen production, opens at the Selwyn Theatre tomorrow afternoon for a brief engagement only. The millions of readers of Frances Hodgson Burnett's world-loved novel, "Little Lord Fauntleroy," will be delighted to know that Mary Pickford in reproducing the story for the screen has preserved all its quaintness and charm, and has been especiallyy faithful to the costumes and manners of the period depicted so vividly by the author. As a vehicle for the lovely Mary, this storp is ideal, running as it does, the entire gamut of emotional drama, pathos and riotous comedy.

The Victorian dresses with their puff sleeves, bustles and long trains, the thatched houses and the magnificent castle shown in this film tend to make it an achievement in the picturelanad. And yet who can ever forget the rheumatic old apple-woman, the portly grocer, and the lovable bootblack, who were such great cronies of Cedric Errol? The human interest and heart appeal in this picture is said to top anything ever yet translated into celluloid.

GLOBE THEATRE

Instead of opening on Monday matinee, as previously announced, the engagement of Douglas Fairbanks in "The Three Muketeers" at the Globe Theatre, will open tomorrow at 3 p. m. All subsequent performances will be given daily at 2:30 and 8:15, while on Sundays the performances will be given at 3 in the afternoon and 8:15 at night. The continued engagement of Douglas Fairbanks, in this masterful visualization of Alexander Dumas' classic novel, will no doubt be welcome news.

BIG BILL FOR MAJESTIC MONDAY

The bill for the coming week, beginning Monday afternoon next, is headed by Alexandra Carlisle, late star of "The Country Cousin," and Harry Corson Clarke, America's champion globe-trotting actor who have been specially engaged by Messrs. Shubert to appear in "It Can Be Done," one of the most successful sketches from the scenic novelty and comedy viewpoints that ever was staged as a one-act play. The scene is the rocking observation platform of an express train hitting the road bed at sixty miles an hour, an effect which is a triumph of stage craft. Alexandra Carlisle in private life is Mrs. Pfeiffer, wife of a Boston physician, and she had the distinction of being the only woman in the Massachusetts delegation to the Republican convention where she made a speech nominating Calvin A. Coolidge for president.

Another headline feature will be La Sylphe, the sensational dancer, in a new spectacular dance cycle, "Behind the Mask." Other features will be: Lillian Fitzgerald, late leading comedienne of Ed Wynn's carnival, entertaining in succession as a French chanteuse, a colleen, a grand opera prima donna, a musical comedy soubrette and a cabaret singer; Walter Weems, "The Southern Humorist," a graduate of minstrelsy and recognized as one of the most gifted monologists; "Three Chums," introducing Teddy Garron, Buddy Lee and Phil Dolan in a diverting singing sketch; "Go Get 'Em" Rogers, a wiry looking, small of stature Ethiopian in a black face singing and dancing comedy number.

McISAAC says that

HOLBROOK BLINN in "The Bad Man" at the Plymouth is distinguishing himself as a Mexican bandit in one of the cleverest and most amusing satirical comedies in a long time.

"THE ROSE GIRL" at the Wilbur is a pretentious and elaborate musical comedy, with good music, good singing and good comedy.

"THE PASSING SHOW" at the Shubert is a typical Winter Garden entertainment, with large quantities of girls and the Howard Brothers to make you laugh.

The Big Films

DOUGLAS FAIRBANKS in "Three Musketeers" moves over to the Globe.

"OVER THE HILL" at the Tremont Temple continues to draw phenomenally.

NEW BARRIE PLAY AT HOLLIS

For more than a year the devoted followers of Sir James M. Barrie have awaited the announcement of the advent of Ruth Chatterton in the latest play of the brilliant Scot, "Mary Rose."

In "Mary Rose," it is said, Barrie has combined in the most delightful manner all the fantasy recalled in "Peter Pan," the whimsical situations of "A Kiss for Cinderilla," the exquisite love story of "The Little Minister," the tender humor of "What Every Woman Knows" and the gripping interest and appeal of "Dear Brutus."

The story of "Mary Rose" has to do with a young girl who mysteriously disappears into the depths of a little island, in response to a wondrous call, to return many ytars later, absolutely unchanged herself, but to find all about her strange and different and herself well-nigh forgotten by those to whom she was most dear. In such a situation the possibilities for the play of Barrie's masterly command of fantastic happenings and whimsical twists and turns may readily be imagined.

Tom Nesbitt, the young actor who portrays the dual male role in "Mary Rose," was cast for the same parts in the London Haymarket Theatre production of the play, and was brought to this country by the late Mr. Alf Haymen to be seen in the same parts with Miss Chatterton. Other important characters are in the capable hands of Miss Winifred Fraser, Bertha Ballinger, Frederick Lloyd, A. S. Homewood and Guy Buckley.

NEWMAN TRAVELTALKS

The thirteenth season of the famous "Traveltalks," by E. M. Newman, the traveler and lecturer, will begin in Symphony Hall on November 18. The series is to include five consecutive Friday evenings and Saturday afternoons.

The lecturers will include "Alaska," "Canadian Rockies," "Iceland Spitzbergen," "Sweden, Norway and Denmark," and "Switzerland," with new and skilfully taken motion pictures of all these parts of the world to show its active life and colored scenes to show its natural beauties.

JOHN CHARLES THOMAS AT TREMONT

A new musical comedy star in the person of John Charles Thomas, the foremost of American baritones, will be Charles Dillingham's contribution to Boston's amusements for a limited engagement at the Tremont Theatre, beginning Monday night. Mr. Thomas will be seen in "The Love Letter," a romantic musical play of comedy and song, based on "The Wolf," a play of the Hungarian dramatist, Franz Molnar, that was known on the American stage as "The Phantom Rival." William LeBaron has written a most engaging musical comedy on this foundation, and Mr. Thomas has the unique opportunity of playing no less than five different characters. Victor Jacobi, master melodist, has supplied the songs and musical ensembles that make up the score of "The Love Letter," and he has fitted the star with several numbers that show his brilliant voice at its best. Mr. Jacobi also has the gift of writing spiritely and characteristic dance music, for which there are many opportunities in the action of the play.

"The Love Letter" has had the highly original stage direction of Edward Royce, who produced "Sally," "The Follies" and "Good Morning, Dearie," among other successes.

NEW CENTRAL

The definite date for the inaugural opening of the Central Theatre, Somerville's newest photoplay theatre de luxe, located on Highland avenue at Central street, will take place on Monday evening, December 5. The Central Theatre, which has ben in process of construction for the past several months, will be devoted exclusively to the showing of feature photoplays and other notable screen attractions.

WHY GIRLS LEAVE HOME

"'Just because a girl prefers silk to cotton you call her wayward,'" indignantly says Anna Illison to her stern father in a powerful dramatic scene in "Why Girls Leave Home," a stirring heart-interest photo-play which heads the extraordinary screen exhibition at the Park Theatre next week. And in that sentence is revealed but one reason, and there are many others, why many daughters have left their family roofs and struck out for themselves.

This unusual photo-drama reveals with the clearness of a search light not only the reason "Why Girls Leave Home," but it also points in a direct manner to a solution of the problem which many girls and their parents are called upon to face at some time or another.

It is a play without the conventional love story, but the interest is none the less compelling.

A Triart production based on Sir Edward Burne-Jones' very famous painting in the Tate Gallery, London, and Tennyson's well-known poem of King Cophetua and the Beggar Maid, will have its first local presentation in "The Beggar Maid." The fact works of the world's greatest artists, of both pen and brush are being presented to the public in such a way that it enables us all to familiarise ourselves with them is worthy of special attention and commendation.

Completing the bill will be "The Barricade," William Christie Cabbane's enjoyable production, which is one of the really big subjects of the year.

Funny On and Off

Saving some of his comedy for the folks at home is the policy of Harry Steppe, leading comedian of the "Jingle Jingle" burlesque company at the Gayety Theatre. Steppe is not a believer in dispensing a lot of laughter while before the footlights and becoming a grouch when the curtain goes down on the evening performance.

"You know some folks get the idea that a comedian is funny on the stage but when he gets home he kicks the dog, hollers about the steak, scolds the kiddies, and makes life miserable for everyone," he said. "Well, I want to tell you that isn't true of good comedians. Most of them are genial by nature and they never give the public all their fun—they save some to spring on the family after the show.

"Of course the real art of comedy, like all other stage work, is in being human. Acting as naturally as possible is the one big important thing for a comedian to do.

"I have received all sorts of letters asking for advice on how to succeed as a comedian. My advice is to study human nature, be earnest and honest with yourself and the public, and work, work, work."

A BOSTON PRODUCTION.

Miss Miriam Collins, who plays the romantic ingenue in "The Bad Man" with a touch of comedy which makes an important role out of a "bit," is strictly a Boston production, and she comes honestly by her dramatic talent, for her mother was Miriam O'Leary Collins, one of the favorites of the old Boston Museum Stock company, probably the finest dramatic organization of its kind this country ever saw.

Miss Collins made her stage debut at the age of seventeen and has been pretty consistently successful since, only a few years, to be sure. But she has had time to play half a dozen roles with conspicuous success.

GRAND OPERA AFTER THE HOWARDS

When Opera Is Sung in Yiddish They Will Join Up, Not 'Till Then

There are large numbers of beautiful ladies in "The Passing Show," but the cold-blooded press agent led the interviewer past their dressing room doors and led him into the place where the Howard Brothers, Eugene and Willie, were getting ready for their entrance with the camel.

Gene was sitting before his mirror and Willie had just arrived. Willie wore the most English-looking outfit of clothing ever seen outside Piccadilly. They were his street clothes. They consisted of a Burberry overcoat of a very pronounced pattern and a suit of tweeds of another pattern. They bespoke the high-salaried actor. He wore the same face which he uses before the footlights. Willie needs no makeup.

"We're going to be interviewed," said Willie. "Now my view on the disarmament conference is that every delegate should be searched at the door for concealed weapons, and no bootlegger be allowed within a mile of the place.

"They should care about bootleggers," said Gene. "These guys are allowed to bring in their own liquor."

"What I want to know," said the reporter, "is whether the rumor is true that you boys are going to separate.

"Separate?" demanded Gene. "What good would Willie be without me."

"That guy would starve without me," said Willie. "For charity I got to stay with him."

"The report was that Fortune Gallo had made Gene an offer to sing tenor in the San Carlo opera."

"And don't you think I couldn't do it," said Gene, "without turning a hair.

"Sure," said Willie. "He studied for grand opera now look at him. I can sing better than him. It was to me that grand opera offer was made."

"You," said Gene, "might get an offer to peddle fish, but I am a real tenor."

"Now, boys," said the press agent, "don't fight. I can sure you would both be good in grand opera, but who would listen to you."

"Caruso," replied Willie. "He came to the show when we were doing the Sextet from Lucia."

"All by yourselves?"

"Sure. We had some tramps with us but we did the real singing. Caruso just leaned on his cane and laughed."

"Say," bawled the stage manager, "are you two comedians going to hold the show up all night. Tell that stuff to the audience."

"Like that they talk to us," lamented Willie. "And us with grand opera impresarios trying to hire us."

"Well," added Gene, "when they sing opera in Yiddish we'll join up."

GRAND OPERA TO OPEN NEXT MONDAY

San Carlo Season at the Boston Opera House Promises Success

The event that the music lovers of Boston have long anticipated—the opening of the San Carlo Grand Opera season— takes place tomorrow night at the Boston Opera House. From then on, every night for two weeks a different opera will be presented, and also for the matinees on Wednesday and Saturday. That the Boston Opera House will present a brilliant scene on Monday is assured by the announcement that every box has been sold for the performance of "Carmen."

Like all real grand opera impresarios, Fortune Gallo, the general director of the San Carlo, has announced several changes in his casts for the opening week and the addition of another tenor, Giuseppe Agostini, who has been added to the corps of artists. It was this that necessitated the switching about.

The cast for "Carmen" will be Esther Ferrabini, Madeline Keltie, Anita Klinova, Frances Morosini, Romeo Boscacci, Joseph Royer, Joseph Tudisco, Natale Cervi, Liugi Dalle Molle and Pietro De Biasi, with Sylvia Tell and the Corps de Ballet. Carlo Peroni will hold the baton.

On Tuesday night in "La Boheme," Bianca Saroya will sing Mimi with Madeline Keltie as Musetta and Giuseppe Agostini appearing as Rudolpho. Graham Marr, Pietro DeBiasi, Natale Cervi and Luigi Dalle Molle complete the cast. The new conductor, Ernesto Knoch, will direct for the first time in Boston.

In "Faust," for the Wednesday matinee, Sofia Charlebois will make her Boston debut with Agostini again as the tenor. The remainder of the cast includes Agnes Kraemer, Anita Klinova, Graham Marr and Luigi Dalle Molle, with Knock as conductor.

Josephine Lucchese, the sensational coloratura soprano, will be heard for the first time in Boston on Wednesday in Gilda in "Rigoletto" with Boscacci as the Duke and Gaetano Viviano, a splendid baritone as Rigoletto.

PEOPLE'S SYMPHONY ORCHESTRA

The People's Symphony Orchestra, seventy players, Emil Mollenhauer, conductor, will give its third concert of the season, Sunday afternoon at 3:30 at the Arlington Theatre. Miss Lois Ewell, dramatic soprano of the Boston Society of Singers, will be the assisting artist. Miss Ewell is a native of Virginia and a grand-niece of Colonel Henry Watterson

The program follows: Litolff, Overture "Robespierre," Le Dernier Jour de la Terreur Op. 55. Verdi, Aria, "O Patria Mia." (My Native Land), from "Aida." Miss Ewell. Mozart, Symphony in G. Minor. MacDowell; "To a Wild Rose." Andrea. "Liebesgeflenster." Svendsen, Episode, "Carnival in Paris," Op. 9.

PENSION FUND CONCERT

A program consisting entirely of the works of Tschaikowsky and Richard Strauss will make memorable the fortieth concert to be given in aid of the Orchestra's Pension Fund by the Boston Symphony Orchestra, Pierre Monteux, conductor, in Symphony Hall on Sunday afternoon, Novemoer 20, at 3:30. Tschaikowsky will be represented on this occasion by his masterpiece, the "Pathetic" Symphony, No. 6. Three tone poems will be played of Richard Strauss', in whom there is a particular interest at the moment, in that he is now visiting this country.

RICHARD STRAUSS

Having arrived and been cordially received in New York after an absence of seventeen years, Richard Strauss, now undertaking a short concert tour of America, will make a single appearance in Boston when he gives a concert entirely of his own music in Symphony Hall on Sunday afternoon, November 13, at 3:30.

This concert will afford a close and personal view of this greatest figure in the present world of music, for he will be observed as a man, as an artist and interpreter of his own music, and as a virtuoso.

LONDON STRING QUARTET

One of the most interesting announcements of the present season is that the world famous London String Quartet is giving a recital on Saturday afternoon, November 26, at Jordan Hall. Details as to their program are not yet at hand; but it can be taken for granted their offerings will arouse intense musical interest. This band of chamber concert artists upon the occasion of their visit to America last season was, by those in the "know," awarded the musical palm for musical excellence.

HANSCOM'S DEBUT

The many friends of Dean Winslow Hanscom, well known dramatic tenor of this city, who has won distinction in musical circles, will be pleased to learn that he will make his debut, on next Monday evening, with the Boston Society of Singers, at the Arlington Theatre. Mr. Hanscom, who is a native of Oakland, Maine, but having spent a good deal of his years in Boston, has been for a long time, active in business although following his graduation from Harvard in 1912, he was urged by his friends to pursue his musical studies.

CHALIAPINE TO SING

The coming brief American tour of Feodor Chaliapine, generally considered the greatest singer Russia has ever produced, will include a single concert in Boston in Symphony Hall, Thursday evening, November 17, at 8:15. Chaliapine has never been heard in Boston before, but only in New York where, a number of seasons ago, his appearances with the Metropolitan Opera Company in New York were regarded as supreme artistic revelations.

POPULAR PRICES AT SYMPHONY CONCERTS

New Series to Be Given on Monday Evenings in Symphony Hall

Much interest is already manifest in the coming extra series of Boston Symphony concerts at popular prices. These concerts, which will take place on Monday evenings, November 28, January 16, February 13, March 13 and April 10, have been aranged to accommodate many people who were disappointed in obtaining seats for Boston Symphony concerts in Symphony Hall and will afford an introductin to others to the full beauties om symphonic musolc as played by this world-famous symphony orchestra.

The new series will have all the advantages of the regular concerts, for they will be given by the full symphony orchestra under its regular conductor, Pierre Montaux. A representative selection of the finest orchestral music will constitute the programs. There will be an additional interest in the five soloists who are engaged to appear at these concerts. They will be: Alfred Mirovitch, the celebated Russian pianist; John Powell, equally famous among American pianists; Estelle Liebling, the noted soprano; Richard Durgin, the splendid concert master of the orchestra, who will play a violin concerto on this occasion, and Jean Badetti, the illustrious leader of the golden-toned 'cello section.

LOEW'S ORPHEUM THEATRE

There is further evidence of quality entertainment in the program announced for the coming week for Lowe's Orpheum Theatre. For the initial half there will be a splendid variety of vaudeville acts topped by Fred La Reine and Company, offering one of the most novel, as well as scientific features ever presented on the vaudeville stage. Surrounding this big headliner will be such capable artists as Pearl Abbott and Company, Monte and Lyons, Mahoney and Cecell, Walter West and Hurley and Hurley.

GORDON'S SCOLLAY SQ. OLYMPIA

D. W. Griffith's picturization of "Way Down East" based on the stage play by Lottie Blair Parker, which for the past twenty-two years was one of the rural classics of the American theatre, will be presented at Gordon's Scollay Square Olympia on Monday at popular prices with the following cast: Lillian Gish, Richard Barthelmess, Mary Hay, Burr McIntosh, Lowell Sherman, Creighton Hale, Mrs. Morgan Belmont, Kate Bruce, Edgar Nelson, George Neville, Vivia Ogden, Porter Strong, Josephine Bernard, Mrs. David Landau, Patricia Fruen, Florence Short, Emily Fitzroy and Myrtle Sutch.

Other Theatres

COLONIAL THEATRE

Monday evening at the Colonial Theatre, Mr. A. L. Erlanger will present his gorgeously clothed musical comedy, "Two Little Girls in Blue" for a short stay. This massively mounted piece was first exhibited to an audience at the Colonial Theatre last April, and won instant favor.

Mr. Erlanger has provided a brilliant cast, including the Fairbanks Twins, long favorites with patrons of Ziegfeld's "Follies"; Jack Donahue, also late of the "Follies," and a great Boston favorite; Emma Janvier, one of the best character women of musical comedy, who has been absent from the stage for the last five years; the Tomson Twins, Jack Squire, Vanda Hoff, Donald Carroll, Evelyn Law, George E. Mack, Yra Jeane and Dorothy Harrison.

SOMERVILLE PLAYERS

"Our Little Wife," a clever, characteristic and extremely amusing farce by the prolific Avery Hopwood is the play to be presented by the competent Somerville Players for the coming week. This is the first time that this brisk and spirited farce has been shown anywhere in New England. It is as funny as "Fair and Warmer," another production from the fertile brain of Mr. Hopwood. "Our Little Wife" is written in Mr. Hopwood's familiar vein of sedulous impropriety. He does not have to translate French farces—for he can write them cleverly himself. The author has the wonderful faculty of knowing how to "skate on thin ice."

B. F. KEITH'S

"Babe" Ruth, his majesty, the King of Swat, in person, comes to B. F. Keith's Theatre next week, perhaps the most remarkable headliner ever offered by a vaudeville house. The famous Bambino will be seen and heard with Wellington Cross in an act written especially for him by Thomas J. Grey. It is described as a satirical home run and is called "That's Good." Dean Moore will be accompanist.

Ruth has been rehearsing the act for several weeks, and for the first time will blossom forth as a singer. Several novel ditties are said to be included in the act.

GORDON'S CENTRAL SQ. THEATRE

No fashionable cabaret in New York, the city of lights, can surpass in brilliance or color or extravagance of finish that which is used in George Fitzmaurice's Paramount production of "Experience," which is to be shown at Gordon's Central Square Theatre. The scenario of this well-known play by George V. Hobart called for a typical New York restaurant, after the manner of such institutions of pleasure before the days of prohibition. No expense was spared to make this scene realistic and beautiful.

WALDRON'S

Abe Reynolds, the hero of many successful seasons in burlesque, will appear all next week at Waldron's in a show which has been named in his honor, "The Abe Reynolds Revue."

'AIDA' IS NEXT OPERA AT THE ARLINGTON

Three More Noted Artists Added to Roster of Boston Society of Singers

Three more noted singers added to the roster of the Boston Society of Singers at the Arlington Theatre; Stella DeMette opening Monday evening in "Aida." No work of Verdi is more popular than "Aida," and it is beloved by operagoers the world over. The story of Aida originated with Marietta Bey, the famous Egyptologist, and seems to have inspired Verdi to unusual efforts. The management of the Boston Society of Singers have taken advantage of the tremendous scope "Aida" gives for a spectacular production, making this opera their master effort; both fro mthe scenic and artistic standpoints it will bear comparison favorably with that of operatic organizations charging twice as much. Starting with "Aida," three more eminent artists will be added to the roster of the Boston Society of Singers, namely: Stella DeMette, the much-heralded contraiffto, who will sing the role of Amneris; Rosetta Neir, a dramatic soprano from Buenos Aires, who will alternate in the role of Aida; Dean Hanscomb, a prominent local tenor, who will sing Radames and who has a voice of remarkable range and power.

GAYETY THEATRE

"Jingle Jingle," a burlesque that is strictly representative of the newer type of burlesque entertainment, is the attraction which promises to attract capacity audiences at the Gayety Theatre next week. It is an I. H. Herk production.

Advance notices of "Jingle Jingle" state that the action is lively and well sustained through two and a half hours of fun.

Most of the comedy in this burlesque is left to Harry Stoppe and Frank Anderson, two comedians who have an immense following on the burlesque circuit. Harry O'Neil is the "straight" man of the company, and he, with Steppe, introduce a specialty that is decidedly novel.

Murray and Hughes contribute a musical number that has recwelved wide praise. The title of the number is Piano Phoole.

Among the feminine principals are Stella Morrissey, Margie Coates and Evelyn Ramsey.

STAGE HANDS' BALL

The committee in charge of the second annual Theatrical Ball, embracing stage employes connected with the leading theatres of this city, are hard at work preparing plans which, when completed, will contain a long list of notable attractions for this annual event, scheduled to take place at Mechanics building on Thursday evening, January 19. The committee has adopted the unique and novel slogan of "Meet me at the fountain of perfume," as the means of attracting thousands to this occasion, which, last season, proved one of the outstanding events in the big theatrical doings of the year. It will be remembered that nearly 10,000 people paid admission to Mechanics building to witness the great theatrical ball, led by more than two score stage and screen notables. For this year the committee aim to offer many added attractions.

Paris, France.

VELVET and fur of some sort continue to be favored by the French couturiers, and judging from their insistence on this combination the smart Parisienne will enjoy a velvet and fur Winter. The handsome tailleur at the left is one of the newest models, and is built of black velvet strikingly trimmed with white monkey fur. The blouse-jacket shows the slender sleeves and small arm-hole, which successfully contends with the wide draped effects, and the becoming low waistline. White velvet flowers are an effective touch at one side of the front. A long overskirt of the velvet fringed with the white fur gives length to the otherwise short skirt, and the collar and small round cuff are also of white fur.

Mist gray velvet, trimmed with goat fur, makes the slender little gown at the right. In this model the embroidered motifs in rose, black and gray are the outstanding features, while the widely cuffed sleeves set in the slightly elongated arm-holes are well worth notice. The twisted girdle with the long ends of the soft velvet outlines the low waist and harmonizes with the looped-under side panels of the skirt.

How "Count" Gregory, the Gentlemanly Scoundrel, Used the Pretty Wife of Capt. Hayne to Blackmail and Rob Big Millionaires

(From Tomorrow's Sunday Advertiser)

THE RUIN of Captain Hayne's charming wife, her sale into the bondage of sin, her awakening and her struggle to free herself from the New York millionaires who held her in bondage her broken heart and her shocking end—all this I look back upon with sorrow and remorse.

I did not kill pretty Alma with my own hands, of course, as I pointed out, but the wicked scheme which I planned and the downward path upon which I set her exquisite feet led as surely to her destruction as if I had accomplished it with a poisoned dagger.

Of course, I will not pretend that my interest in the pretty wife of Captain Hayne was a fatherly one I was in financial distress, searching about in every direction for some means of replenishing my purse. If I could play upon the ambitions of Mrs. Hayne and encourage her dissatisfaction with life and profit by whatever she might do—I had no conscience in undertaking it.

Before morning I had thought the subject out to a satisfactory conclusion. I had definitely formulated a plan. I fell asleep satisfied and confident.

At ten o'clock I sent my card to Mrs. Hayne and was glad to find that the Captain had left for the horse show grounds and was, therefore, safely out of the way. Mrs. Hayne was a little surprised to see me. I decided to go directly to the point and find out at once whether my proposal would be rebuffed as an unpardonable insult or whether, as I believed, Mrs. Hayne would welcome my unscrupulous proposition.

"My dear Mrs. Hayne," I began, "there is an old adage, you know, that in helping others we should not be ashamed to help ourselves. If you will not be too scrupulous, I can help you—and in aiding you, assist myself. Shall we call it a bargain?"

"Let us call it more than a bargain—a bond," she replied, eagerly, without questioning what it was I had to propose.

• • •

This sealed the iniquitous bargain between the unfortunate wife of Captain Hayne and myself. The proceeds of that bargain were, it is true, all the things which Alma Hayne held dear and thought were worth while in this world.

Almost from that moment she stepped into an entirely different world. From the poverty of a British army captain's weekly pay and all the pinching that life meant on such a meagre allowance, Alma Hayne found herself the petted darling of New York multimillionaires who opened their checkbooks at her faintest smile, who set her up with town house and country estate, surrounded her with household servants, maids, butlers, chauffeurs and automobiles.

This is from tomorrow's astonishing revelations of gay life among the rich fashionables of New York, Newport and Boston. You get it—

HOTELS PREPARE FOR FOOTBALL CROWDS

Special Entertainment for Throngs Attending Yale and Brown Contests

Halloween is now history, but the big football games are coming and special preparations are being made in many Boston hotels and restaurants for the big crowds who will attend the Brown and Yale games.

More and more dancing is being indulged in by theatregoers before or after the show and such places as the Brunswick are usually crowded so that it is difficult to secure tables without reservations.

FRASCATI POPULAR.

The merry airs of Italian opera aid your digestion when you dine at the Frascati restaurant on Huntington avenue. The Frascati in less than two years has become one of the most popular dining places of the city, very largely through the able management of Ponziano Maturo.

Mr. Maturo is a hotel man who learned his business from the bottom up. He does not hesitate to admit that he began as a bus boy and served a long apprenticeship as a waiter in various celebrated restaurants. Maturo was one of the popular waiters in the famous Hotel Mieusset, popular resort of celebrated Bostonians a generation ago. He was head waiter for years at the Cafe Napoli and when he opened his own restaurant he knew from personal experience just what the public was likely to demand.

The Frascati is located in the Hotel Oxford, occupying the dining rooms which for years were unsuccessful. In a very short time the fame of the Italian cuisine, the good fellowship and the excellent music of that establishment have brought him a patronage which is extremely encouraging.

NEW ITALIAN CAFE.

The new Italian restaurant located in the Blackstone Hotel, Haymarket square, is attracting much new patronage since the change in management recently.

Featuring Italian and French cooking, many are attracted because of the ability to get particularly Italian foods cooked by Italians in Italian style.

The appointments in this cafe are new and sanitary conditions of the kitchen are a delight to the eye. The low prices maintained here are making this one of the very popular restaurants of the market section of the city.

ORIENTAL DELICACIES.

The Grand Garden restaurant, No. 660 Washington street, is one of Boston's most beautiful American and Chinese restaurants. With its wonderful teakwood furnishings, mission wood booths and oriental fixtures, one can almost feel they are visiting foreign lands. The choicest oriental delicacies are served in American and Chinese style. Music and cabaret can also be enjoyed.

MINE HOSTS.

Ponyiano Maturo and L. C. Prior (top).

L. C. Prior, proprietor of the Hotels Lenox and Brunswick, has made a reputation among American hotel men because he performed the extraordinary feat of taking two unsuccessful hotels and turning them into highly profitable ventures.

Until the coming of Prior the Hotel Lenox was conspicuously unsuccessful, while the Hotel Brunswick was an old-fashioned family hotel with a small clientele. In a very few years, by up-to-date methods, liberal expenditures and energy, Prior has made both these enterprises conspicuously successful.

The Hotel Brunswick now bears a reputation all over the country for operating one of the few dancing restaurants where prohibition has not been able to banish crowds and gaiety. The exceptionally good music of the Brunswick orchestra, the admirable service and splendid cuisine have made it the Mecca of Bostonians for dinner and after the theatre. No matter how conditions are elsewhere you can always find a crowd upon the dancing floor of the Egyptian room.

The Hotel Lenox has become an extremely popular residential and transient hotel where an admirable restaurant and a splendid orchestra combine to keep the guests contented.

HAPGOOD SCORES MINIMUM WAGE LAW RETRIAL

Lawyers Say Refusal to Re-Argue Case Would Be Justified, Writer Declares

By NORMAN HAPGOOD,
Staff Correspondent of the Boston American.

Washington, Nov. 5. — A decision that may be rendered in Washington on Monday would arouse much feeling if the people took any interest in that department of their government which has the power to nullify what is done by the legislative branch.

The interference of the judges in the development of industrial relations seems to me a great evil, but I must show tact in writing about the subject. Contempt of court is not to be indulged in lightly.

This would be the most inopportune moment to spend a few weeks in jail. Next week there opens an epoch marking conference of the nations, called by President Harding, and I have the job of reporting the doings of that conference, day by day, for a long time.

So let us describe the situation without any strong words. The story shows what one judge can do to force his preferences about the treatment of the laboring class on Congress.

MINIMUM WAGE LAW.

Congress passed a law that women in industry, in this district, should be protected by a minimum wage law. Such laws exist in many States of the Union, and have been uniformly upheld by their courts. They are a familiar method of social protection in other parts of the world.

Last Spring this law was upheld here in the district. It happened, however, that one judge dissented, and a technicality has given him the power to have it tried over again. There is no pretence that it was not fully tried before, and fully considered. But this judge did not like the decision.

The technicality was that when a judge of the highest court is sick the court can call on a member of the next court to sit in his place. That was done in this case. The parties had the choice of hearing the case with two judges or calling in a third.

They called in the third. As the decision went in favor of the protection of the working women, however, an application was made for another hearing.

DENIED BY MAJORITY.

It was denied by the majority of the judges who had sat in the case. So the attorney for the employers, who did not wish to pay the minimum wage, got after the sick judge and he voted for the new hearing.

It makes a neat point of law whether the demand for a rehearing was legally granted. As a matter of legal morals it has caused more comment than anything that has happened around here in a long time.

Some lawyers think that Professor Felix Frankfurter, of the Harvard Law School, ought to have refused to re-argue the case, merely standing on the decision of the majority of those judges actually concerned in the case.

He chose, however, to argue it, but he did it in a way to leave no doubt about what he thought of the procedure. He told the court that he was at loss what to say, as all the arguments had been fully presented and considered. He came as near as he dared to saying the procedure was not legitimate.

ONE JUDGE LEAVES.

When Mr. Frankfurter made his remarks one of the judges rose in his place, gathered his robes around him, and strode out of the court.

There was a hasty consultation of the other judges. Finally the chief justice told Mr. Frankfurter that, while he himself saw nothing improper in Mr. Frankfurter's observations, he had been instructed by the majority to demand an apology.

In the argument about whether or not the demand for an apology was justified, the offended justice took occasion to refer to such social legislation as Bolshevism.

Mr. Frankfurter pointed out that the laws were passed long before the word Bolshevism was ever heard of.

SAME AS BOLSHEVISM.

The judge admitted that, but he held that the whole reform movement of the last twenty or thirty years was the same thing as Bolshevism.

I suppose I am within my legal rights in observing that it is a dangerous thing for the courts to feel the responsibility of preventing the people, through their legislatures, from developing along modern lines.

At least, if I am in contempt in holding that theory, I have the satisfaction of knowing that the leading defender of the theory is Mr. Justice Holmes.

CURLEY RENEWS ATTACK ON MURPHY

Says Opening Speech Failed to Develop a Program to Better Conditions

Ex-Mayor Curley renewed the attack on his opponent for the mayoralty, John R. Murphy, in a speech at a rally in Warren Hall, Market square, Brighton.

Mr. Curley decried the opening speech of his opponent as an evasion of one of the main issues of the campaign—taxation. He deplored the latter's characterisation of him as "Hun and Barbarian" as not in keeping with Mr. Murphy's years.

SAYS SPEECH "SPINELESS."

Curley said:

"Never in the history of a political campaign for an important public office was a more spineless and deplorable presentation made than that last evening presented by the Coalition candidate—John R. Murphy. With the commerce of Boston at the lowest ebb ever known in the history of our city; with the grass growing upon the wharves and thousands of longshoremen for months without the opportunity for a livelihood; with industries paralyzed and nearly one hundred thousand persons out of employment and not one word of encouragement, not one thought that might point the way was uttered by the candidate whom Demarest Lloyd has termed 'The Savior of Boston.'

"With taxation and valuation so prohibitive as to destroy any prospect of industrial or commercial revival, not one word was spoken upon the all-important subject of taxation—unquestionably because of fear that he might injure the feelings of the reform tax-dodgers responsible in part for his candidacy.

RAPS FIN. COM. METHODS.

"The public was justified in believing that the man who sounded every depth and shoal of dishonor and infamy to become Mayor might have some program that would be helpful to the people of our city, but not one word was uttered upon civic betterment or upon even the important subject of street railroad charges.

"During my term as Mayor, the present fire commissioner occupied the important position of Chairman of the Finance Commission, a position in America which corresponds with the position of police spy in Russia and no Russian police spy ever descended to lower depths to accomplish his purpose by destruction, than Mr. Murphy."

STAR OBSERVERS IN SESSION AT HARVARD

WHITE COMPANY PUTS OUT NEW TYPE CAR

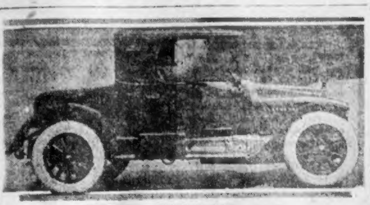
Business Model Has Appearance of Passenger Auto, but Is of Truck Construction

To meet the need of salesmen and men whose duties make it necessary for them to travel over scattered and sparcely settled territory, the White Company has placed on the market a new type of car known as the White business car.

At first glance the new model gives the impression that the company has returned to the passenger car field, but such is not the case. While the business car has the appearance of a passenger model it is of truck construction, combining the rugged, durable qualities of a truck with the comfort and trim appearance of a touring car.

The business car makes an especial appeal to the salesman who covers a territory made up largely of small towns, as it enables him to double and sometimes treble his calls per day. The customer in the one-train-a-day town can be called on more frequently since the business car makes it unnecessary to devote an entire day to one customer.

It fills a long-felt want of foremen and superintendents of utility companies who are doing extension work in several localities at one time; of mining, oil and logging companies whose men must get about in rough country in all weather; of cattlemen with extensive ranches; of road contractors, inspectors and insurance men; of sugar and cotton growers with scattered plantations.



WHITE BUSINESS CAR

This new type of car has the appearance of a passenger model, but is of truck construction. It is designed to meet tire requirements of salesmen.

The meeting will be addressed by Z. J. Blake and H. A. Twitchell.

2 INSPECTORS ARE MADE LIEUTENANTS

New Bedford, Nov. 5.—Inspectors Albert B MacKinstry and Albert E Mosher have been transferred from the inspector's division of the local police department to the uniformed force with a rank of lieutenant in a general order issued by Chief of Police Doherty.

Dear Mr. Fixit: The undersigned will appreciate it very much to hear from you on the following: In my Ford engine the low speed band is dragging. It manifests itself when changing from low to high. The car slows down and then after a minute or so picks up in high. The same dragging produces a very unpleasant noise like knocking or pounding on a box with something heavy. Can you please tell me how to remedy this? I want to do it myself. Also please tell me how long the clutch spring should be spread. At present I have it 2 5-16 inches. It seems as if it would not spread out any more. When I grasp on it with my hand it turns around with ease, as if there was no pressure. Does this indicate weak spring? Can a new spring be put on without dismounting the engine? Awaiting your reply, I am
A. K., Lynn, Mass.

Your trouble is caused by the high speed clutch not engaging properly. It needs to be tightened up. Turn the high speed clutch finger adjustment screws one-half turn. This ought to take care of this trouble. The clutch spring should be about 2 5-16 inches long, so this seems to be O. K. However, if this still gives you trouble it may be necessary to put in a new spring, as the tension of springs often varies. It is impossible to put in a new clutch spring without lifting the motor out of the frame.

Dear Mr. Fixit—Would you be good enough to advise if it would be satisfactory when putting a Buick car away for the Winter to place blocks under the four hub caps? It has been intimated that this action might possibly spring the axle, and I wish to make certain of this before taking further action.
C. J. J., Milton, Mass.

While you would have no trouble from placing the blocks under the hub caps, it distributes the weight of the load a bit better by placing jacks under the axles between the wheels instead of outside.

Dear Mr. Fixit—I cannot get my 1917 Ford to run. When I jack up the rear wheel it will start, but when I take it off the jack and let it on the ground it will stop and it will not star on battery. Hoping you will be able to give me an answer, I am,
J. W. K., Jamaica Plain, Mass.

Your trouble may possibly come from a worn transmission bushing which pulls the magneto out of place and thus preventing a current from passing to the cylinder. When your car is in neutral a contact is formed, but when you attempt to engage it in speed, this worn bushing prevents the magneto from acting properly by pulling the magneto away from the field.

Dear Mr. Fixit—Will you please tell me what the trouble is with my clutch, which is a wet multiple disc clutch. I took it apart and cleaned it and put it back O. K., but when I press the clutch pedal down it sticks there and does not come back. It has to be pulled back. My car is a 1917 Hudson.
L. A. A., Boston.

You have not tightened up properly on the clutch bandspring and there is not tension enough to throw the pedal back into place. Also be sure that the clutch pedal is not sticking in the floor board.

BUSINESS MEN LIKE CADILLAC ROADSTER

New Type 61 Affords Rapid and Convenient Transportation for Busy Motorist

The new Roadster of Type 61 Cadillac, which has just been put on the market, is receiving a great deal of attention from business and professional men. It affords quick, sure transportation for those who wish to make trips about town, to suburban residences or the country club, in a hurry.

It has ample speed for all emergencies, and its rakish lines make a marked appeal to those who insist on smartness in their motor cars.

The convenience of the Roadster is added to by an unusually large luggage compartment under the rear deck and also an extra luggage space just back of the seat. The rear deck is designed to make possible the use of a concealed rumble seat for two.

CHEVROLET FOUR NINETY PROVES POPULAR

Prospective Buyers Are Attracted by New Emergency Brake, Hand Controlled

W. C. Sills of the Sills-Chevrolet Company, reports that business is good, especially on the improved Four Ninety model.

"This new model certainly has attracted much attention since it was announced," said Mr. Sills recently. "There have been quite a few changes in this popular model and these have added to its already long list of owners.

"The new rear axle with spiral bevel ring gear and pinion has materially changed the rear end of the Four Ninety. It has corrected any faults which may have previously existed under the old construction. We have improved the body by lowering the front seats, which makes a more comfortable car to ride in.

"Another feature which has been added is the hand-controlled emergency brake and we have also put in Timken bearings in the front wheels and a new top with Jiffy curtains. All these features add to the appearance of the car and make it more desirable.

"We have added to our service facilities and have put in a larger supply of parts. Service' is a hobby with us, in fact our slogan is 'Sills-Service-Satisfaction,' and we are living up to our motto.

"I have always believed that service constituted one of the most important parts of the motor car industry and we are going to show Boston and New England motorists that our service department is a model for all."

OCTOBER NASH SALES SMASH ALL RECORDS

"More Nash cars were sold the last week in October than for the entire month of October a year ago, and within two cars of doubling October, 1919, sales," says C. P. Rockwell, New England Nash distributor. "This not only sets an enviable record for Nash sales in Boston, but is good evidence of the increasing popularity of these medium-priced four and six-cylinder cars.

"Our organization extends far outside the four walls of the salesroom. By that I mean Nash owners throughout the territory realize they are an integral part of all that Nash stands for. Consequently, enthusiastic Nash owners and boosters, and we trace orders every day to these, our owner salesmen."

GMC
General Motors Trucks

The Reasons
For GMC One Ton Leadership

GMC Model K-16, One Ton Truck, has fully met the increasing demand for one ton trucks, because it embodies the most complete mechanical requirements of its class.

No other one ton truck is adapted to such a wide variety of hauling.

Here are the reasons: Model K-16, to begin with, is a real truck. Every unit is a real truck part, of truck proportions.

Staunchly built and equipped with a remarkably efficient power plant, it is capable of the highest speed required of a one ton truck.

Again, every mechanical improvement is directed toward economy of operation, and the price, recently reduced $500, makes the first cost of vital importance from the standpoint of economy.

Cord tires, Electric lights and starter are standard equipment.

Among the practical, common-sense mechanical improvements are Removable Valve Lifter Assemblies, Removable Cylinder Walls, Dual Cooling, Super-Heated Carburetion and a Centrifugal Fly-Ball Governor.

See this truck and the heavier GMC models on the dealer's floors, and get price reductions on the other models.

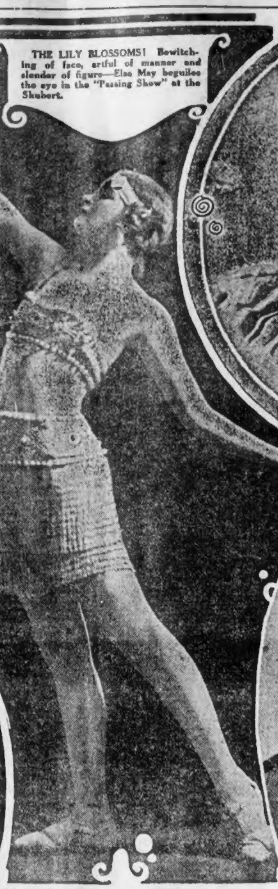
FOOD FOR THOUGHT OR SWEETS FOR EYE ABOUND ON HUB STAGE

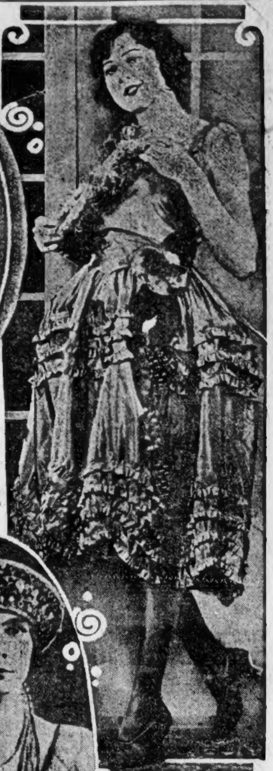
JINGLE GIRL! Miss Margie Coate, who lends her talent and intriguing personality to "Jingle Jangles," coming to the Gayety next week. Not a noisy show.

WHEN A GOOD ACTOR is bad he is quite often good—if you grasp what we mean. Anyway, Holbrook Blinn, chief mummer in "The Bad Man" at the Plymouth, plays a bad role well and you like him for it. He is pictured above as a merry bandit bantering with Thomas Shearer.



THE LILY BLOSSOMS! Bewitching of face, artful of manner and slender of figure—Else May beguiles the eye in the "Passing Show" at the Shubert.

LO, A NEW AMNERIS LOOMS! Stella De Mette, talented contralto to be heard Monday evening as Amneris in "Aida" at the Arlington.



NEXT DANCE, PLEASE! This daring dancing frock, of tomato red and gold shot taffeta, with scalloped and slightly hooped skirt, is very popular with the younger set. (U. & U.)

ALONG CAME RUTH! Moving figures at dawn on a desert oasis—that's the suggestion you get from the Oriental dancing of Ruth Boylan in "The Rose Girl" at the Wilbur.

SERGT. WOODFILL (former captain) has been picked by Gen. Pershing as the one greatest American hero in the war. He will serve as body bearer for body of unknown hero. (Int.)

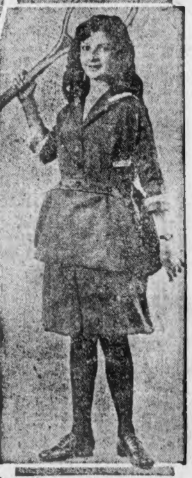
THE PLAY'S the thing. Miss Carolyn W. Farriday, N. Y. society girl, has forsaken pink teas for the stage. Now with Sothern and Marlowe. (K.)

HAVE YOU a little fairy in your home? Here's a li'l' brown fella. This Nipponese bambino was the "strong man" of the first Japanese baby show ever held in Los Angeles. He won a medal, too. His chest expanded is 21 inches. Weighs 31 pounds. (Int.)

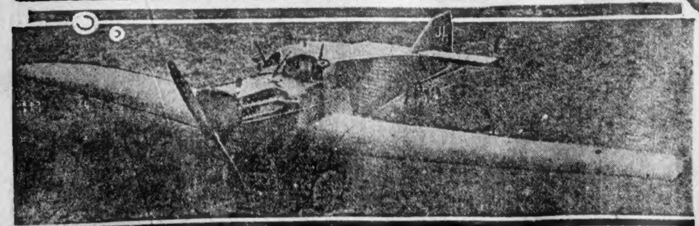
LIFTING ONE! George R. Pfann, quarterback of the Cornell pigskin boys, looms as a possible all-America winner. Cornell, undefeated thus far this season, clashes today with Columbia and should defeat them. Watch Pfann. Pictured here making a long punt.

LADY EGG-A-DAY became the world's champion layer when she offered her 340th egg within a year at the Georgetown, Del., international competition. Is a Buff Orpington. (Int.)

GIRLS WILL BE BOYS! Miss Ethel Canfield, 19, and pretty, was arrested for parading down Broadway (N. Y.) in boy's attire. She says it was only a prank. (Int.)

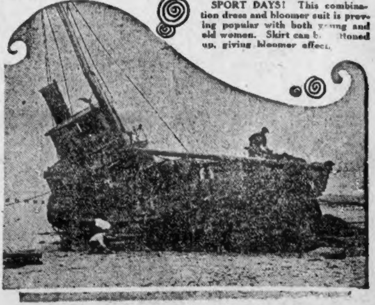


SPORT DAYS! This combination dress and bloomer suit is proving popular with both young and old women. Skirt can be buttoned up, giving bloomer effect.



WHEN DEATH FLIES WITH WINGS! Among all the death-dealing airplanes developed since the war, the one pictured above is the most terrible agent of destruction yet devised, according to experts who have seen it operated. The plan is metal covered and will mount 60 machine guns. It has a tremendous wing spread placed at such an angle that great speed can be developed. Was recently tested by government officials at Washington and New York. (W. W.)

CONFIDENCE ANEW! Arthur Burch (on the right), co-defendant with Madalyn Obenchain on the charge of slaying J. Belton Kennedy, has become as cheerful as a schoolboy as the time for his trial draws near. Rumors she would desert him and turn State's evidence have failed to disconcert him. Shown here buying letter paper from the jail "store."



HOW COULD YOU, HATTIE? Buffeted by a heavy sea, the [illegible] Bell, carrying laundry to the army base in Brooklyn, went aground on Dykes Beach, near Sea Gate, L. I. Photo shows the craft being pinned up at low tide in preparation for an attempt to haul it into the water. (U. & U.)

Get a good rest tomorrow. Don't over-exercise. Limit your walk to twenty or thirty miles. Take a nap. Retire early. You'll want to be in perfect condition on Monday.

The Boston American's great $5,000 Book Title Picture Test is about to begin. Monday's the day. Sixty pictures. Sixty days. Then, a great New Year's distribution of five thousand dollars in two hundred and nineteen awards. Look them over! Place a mark against the award you select for your own:

First award	$1,000
Second award	750

Ninth award	50

110 awards of $5 each	550
Total	$5,000

Test Picture No. 1 will be printed on Test Picture No. 1 will be printed on Wednesday, and so on for sixty week days.

Each picture will represent the title of some book. What book? That will be for the participant to decide. But it will be ONE of the books you find in the List of Titles printed with the picture. One title in the List will fit the picture better than any other title in the list. THAT title will be the Correct Title. Once you have hit upon it, once you are satisfied that you have located the right one, your "work" will be over for the day.

Those who took part in the Movie Play Title Test and the Songs of the World Title Test will notice a decided improvement in this Test from the very beginning. The gifted gentleman who painted the pictures has taken more time on them. Many are good enough for book illustrations. More remarkable still is the almost complete absence of text. Except in three instances the first fifty pictures [illegible] to us WITHOUT A WORD IN THEM. [illegible] three exceptions [illegible] one word each. [illegible] PICTURES [illegible] only one [illegible] nu the Correct Title.

BETTY ALDEN'S COMMENT ON SOCIETY

Anthony-Hartwell Wedding Marks November Calendar

Miss Mary Hartwell, member of the Vincent Club and the Sewing Circle, whose marriage to Reed Pierce Anthony takes place next Saturday noon. Miss Hartwell is the daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Alfred Townsend Hartwell of Chestnut Hill.

MISS MARY HARTWELL

By BETTY ALDEN.

OCTOBER was so thoroughly taken up with important nuptial events among the fashionables that charity functions, dances and debutante presentations refused to be ignored any longer. Thus November is more or less devoid of ceremonials, although occasionally, of course, a wedding creeps in here and there to find a place on the social calendar.

Just a week from today comes the marriage of Mary Abbe Hartwell of Chestnut Hill to Reed Pierce Anthony of Commonwealth avenue and the ceremony, which takes place at noon in the Church of the Redeemer, Chestnut Hill, promises to be attended by a representative delegation of the socially-elect. The groom is the son of Mrs. Randolph Frothingham of No. 112 Commonwealth avenue.

The bride-to-be, the daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Alfred Townsend Hartwell, is a member of the 1919-20 Sewing Circle and the Vincent Club. Those who attend the shows of the latter organization remember Miss Hartwell as one of the girls in the famous "Fan Drill," which was distinctly one of the most attractive features of last year's show. The [illegible] of the drill were chosen with due regard to [illegible] and naturally the fourteen girls selected to take part in it considered themselves honored. Among these chosen few were Nancy Ely, Elinor Jackson, Mary Baer, Edith Bremer, Penelope Curtis, Mary Hunnewell and Susan Lee.

Following the announcement of the young couple's engagement last May a series of entertainments were given in their honor and now that invitations have been sent out for their marriage on Saturday, several affairs have been given for them this week. Yesterday afternoon, Mrs. Lyon Weyburn (Ruth Anthony), [illegible] sister of the prospective bridegroom, gave a tea for Miss Hartwell at her Marlboro street house.

[illegible] the 1919-20 Sewing Circle contingent, of which the bride-to-be is a member, are the Misses Eleanor Hunneman, Penelope Curtis, Lena Turnbull, Elizabeth Cabot, Ella Snelling, Hope Gaston, Rosamond Adie, Elizabeth Caswell, Louisa Weld, Elinor Jackson and Mrs. Robert Burnett Choate (Katherine Crosby), whose wedding took place on the North Shore last month.

The Anthony-Hartwell nuptial of next Saturday recalls the marriage, about five years ago, of young Anthony's mother, then Mrs. S. Reed Anthony, to Randolph Frothingham. This marriage made Mr. Frothingham the father-in-law of Lyon Weyburn, his chum of many years, as the latter had married Miss Ruth Anthony, daughter of Mrs. S. Reed Anthony, just a short time before Mrs. Anthony became Mrs. Frothingham.

A goodly portion of the Vanderbilt clan whose comings and goings are of interest to society almost everywhere are to be established for the coming Winter in Washington.

The senior Mrs. Vanderbilt after a prolonged Summer in Newport has taken an apartment at the capital to be near her younger daughter, the Countess Laszlo Szechenyi (Gladys Vanderbilt), whose husband is believed to be the Minister-elect from Hungary. The Countess spent a season or two in Washington as a child when her parents occupied the house on Vermont avenue and K street, since taken over for business purposes. She is now established at No. 2929 Massachusetts avenue with her children where the count will join her on his return from Hungary. The former Gladys Vanderbilt is a sister of the late Alfred Vanderbilt, as well as of General Cornelius Vanderbilt and Mrs. Harry Payne Whitney.

Mr. and Mrs. Cornelius Vanderbilt, Jr. (Rachel Littleton) are the latest members of the Vanderbilt clan to establish a residence in Washington for the Winter, where they are temporarily at Wardman Park Inn. Mr. Vanderbilt, Jr. is the grandson of Mrs. Cornelius Vanderbilt Senior.

[illegible]

[illegible] Of the [illegible] were Frederick J. Bradlee, Jr. [illegible] Waite H. Trumbull [illegible] B. Wigglesworth, Harvard [illegible] and Thomas S. Woods, Jr., Harvard '20. Among the student managers making the trip to Princeton were Edwin S. Webster, Jr., of Chestnut Hill and John H. Sherburne, Jr., of Brookline.

Random Notes of Prominent Folk in Town and Country

MRS. HORATIO NELSON SLATER of Boston and New York, who will be for the coming Winter at No. 1 Lexington avenue, in Gotham, is on the committee for the series of lecture-musicales given under the auspices of the advisory council of Schola Cantorum. These affairs have been given in New York the past two seasons and this Winter they will, as usual, take place in the large private homes of wealthy residents, the first of the series taking place in Mrs. Vincent Astor's Fifth avenue mansion.

Mr. and Mrs. Augustin Parker of Charles River, Mass., who are sojourning at Hot Springs, Va., were recently dinner guests of Mr. and Mrs. Frederick Parker of Bedford, Mass., at the Southern resort.

After a prolonged stay at their Summer home in Gloucester, Mr. and Mrs. Stephen W. Sleeper have returned to their town home at No. 336 Beacon street for the Winter. They have with them Mr. Sleeper's cousin, Miss Edith Chesborough, who is to make her debut at a house dance the latter part of November.

Returning also from the North Shore are Mr. and Mrs. Harcourt Amory and their family, who are back at the town house, No. 293 Beacon street, for the Winter. The Summer was spent at the Amory estate at Pride's Crossing.

Mrs. Augustus Neal Rantoul has concluded her stay at Hot Springs, Va., and is returning to Boston.

$25 ALIMONY MONTHLY FOR MRS. STACK

Wife of Former Parker Hill Hospital Doctor Also Allowed $30 Lawyer's Fees

The matrimonial troubles of Dr. John J. Stack and his wife, Annie E. Stack, were brought to the attention of Judge Sanderson in the equity motion division of the Superior Court yesterday afternoon, when counsel for Mrs. Stack asked that she be allowed $350 as counsel fees and that provision be made for temporary alimony.

The Stacks were married on August 20, 1921, and soon separated. Each charges the other with cruel and abusive treatment in suits for divorce filed by them in the Superior Court. The doctor brought his libel on September 21, and Mrs. Stack's libel was entered on October 17.

John F. Myron, who represented Mrs. Stack, said that Dr. Stack, who was connected with the Parker Hill Hospital, had an income of $400 a month. Since the separation Dr. Stack had been paying his wife $100 a month and if this were continued no further alimony would be asked for.

Mrs. Stack, Mr. Myron said, had been ordered by her physician to leave Boston on account of ill health.

M. J. Doyle for Dr. Stack said that never before in his experience had such an excessive amount been asked for as counsel fees, and he thought $30 was sufficient. The doctor, according to Mr. Doyle, earned $329 a month and in addition to paying his wife $100 a month, he also was supporting his sixteen-year-old son by a former wife, now dead.

The doctor, he said, had been coerced into giving his wife $100 a month through fear of losing his position [illegible] the authorities at Washington.

Judge Sanderson allowed Mrs. Stack $30 as counsel fees and $25 a month as temporary alimony.

DICK FAGAN AND YOUNG BRIDE REUNITED

Heiress and Dartmouth Student Reported on Way to Alaska Following Reconciliation

New York, Nov. 5.—Richard Fagan and his pretty young bride, Katherine Stevens Fagan, have re-eloped. "I can't keep up with these children," said Mrs. Stevens. "They have my head spinning. But they are reconciled and are off on a second honeymoon. I can't tell you where they are for I don't know."

The young couple disappeared mysteriously in September, but later were heard from by their friends in Atlantic City, Boston and Hanover, N. H. It was from the last-named place that they eloped on April 11. Dick was then just eighteen and a Dartmouth undergraduate.

The news of their re-elopement came to light as a result of reports from Boston linking Mrs. Fagan with Stan Caswell, the young millionaire husband of Jessie Reed, Follies' chorus girl.

NEWTON FAVORITE OVER CAMBRIDGE LATIN IN GAME TODAY

By FRED C. LANE

Car service in the direction of Newton will be taxed to capacity to carry the friends and supporters of interscholastic sports to the big contest of the week-end, which features Cambridge Latin against Newton at Claflin Field, Newton. Other scholastic games are eclipsed by this contest.

Much is at stake for both teams that means the hardest-fought game of the many on the card. Newton, undefeated and coupled with Malden for the Suburban League leadership, is made a 5 to 4 favorite over Cambridge Latin, which was beaten by Malden.

• • •

The teams enter today's fray with their full strength and, barring breaks, the better team will win. Cambridge Latin was without the services of Captain Isidore Zarakov for three weeks. That caused the defeat by Malden and in other games it was pushed into tight corners.

• • •

Zarakov is back in harness. That means a new Cambridge team will play Newton. Without their leader the team lacked the pep that characterized them at the opening of the season.

• • •

Newton, on the other hand proudly possesses a team equally as good as the championship organization that carried its colors in 19[illegible]. Herb Garrity was never better at end running and off tackle plays. This year above all others he has picked his holes with accuracy and shifted his field with the skill of a star.

Captain Al Stafford is using that young, yet wise head for football in better style this season than ever. Although without the services of Bob Garrity, Stafford is running the ball for the same amount of gains as did the versatile Bob.

• • •

Both teams are evenly matched and the real grid game of the season is in store for all those who journey out to the Garden City.

• • •

Somerville High's remarkably fine showing in the last few games has started things moving in this league. This is especially so since their fine performance against Medford, whom they held scoreless. This new lease of life by the Red and Black athletes is the reason for Coach McDonald of Malden working his charges harder than ever to stave off an eleventh-hour defeat.

• • •

These two rivals will meet at Malden today and the usual interest that is shown by the Malden supporters will be in evidence. No school in the league has the backing that Malden has had this season. It has helped materially in their winning many games. Somerville will have an advantage in weight on the line, but this handicap is no new experience for the Malden line men, who have faced the same problem in all games to date.

Captain Al Butler playing right end will be given the opportunity to display his fine work as wing man since many of Somerville plays are of the end-running variety. Captain Kelliher will buck against Crawford scoring wing man of Malden, and a question that has given close followers of the sport something to talk about will be settled.

• • •

Pol. McPhail is in rare form for today's struggle and a real hot contest is in store for those who wend their way to Dilboy Field. Honey Lewin, Upham and Sandberg are sure to display the same battle that brought about the downfall of Cambridge Latin.

Waltham High with three losses to Portland High in the same number of years will try to reverse the downfall of preceding Waltham teams by winning today. Never was Waltham in a better position to accomplish this feat. The team has not been defeated this Fall and has encountered some tough propositions. That 6 to 0 performance against Haverhill High will send Waltham into today's contest a heavy favorite.

Lowrey will be at his best which is 50 per cent. of the aggressiveness of the eleven. This year's outfit is an eleven-man combination with [illegible] player starring at his position.

Upsets of some sort are expected in the North Shore League that is deadlocked with three teams tied. Lynn Classical entertains Revere and this year's team from the [illegible] city is the scrappiest bunch of gridiron warriors to ever represent that school. Classical had the most luck in the Beverly game last Saturday and many are expecting a change of fortune for Coach Joyce's aggregation.

Beverly, one of the three tied for high honors in this league, will play Marblehead at Beverly. Intense interest is shown in this contest, and the largest attendance of the season on these grounds is expected. Marblehead has suffered some hard knocks this season at the hands of Lynn Classical and Peabody High, but both were honorable defeats considering the [illegible] of both winners. Beverly should win, but not until it has shown all its latest gridiron tricks.

Gosh! I Hope Somebody Knows Me!

They've gone and stuck my picture into the Boston Daily Advertiser's $5,000 Movie Contest. It is going to run sixty days. Two pictures every day. All you've got to do is name us. First Prize, $1,000.

It's going to be the greatest Movie Contest that ever was. The Editor of the Advertiser says he won't disguise a single picture. "No masks for me," says he. Seems unbelievable, but that's what he told me.

They'll run a feller's picture every day, and a gal's picture right beside it. I'll bet they'll put a good-looker alongside of me. Ain't we got fun!

That's all I know about the $5,000 Movie Contest, but I hope YOU win the big prize. You'll find the rules, etc., in the Boston Daily Advertiser.

Yours merrily,

Flaxer has been replaced at quarter by Brauer, Griffen goes in the latter's place at end. The rest of the lineup will probably be the same.

HOCKEY PLAYERS MAKE CLUBS SCRAMBLE

Four Teams After Shoe Trades Men, but Pere Marquettes Have Inside Track

Pere Marquette Council, K. C., appears to have the inside track in the scramble after the former Shoe Trades Club players. The other teams that claim several of the men, St. Alphonsus Association, Shawmut Council, K. C., and Melrose Hockey Club, have been outdistanced by Manager [illegible] of the Pere Marquettes, who has signed five already.

The teams have until November 15 to register their players and a lively campaign between the three managers will develop.

While it was expected that St. Alphonsus would put in a claim for Shoe Trades players, the fact that Shawmut Council and Melrose also claimed some of them [illegible] at the [illegible] head [illegible] of the B. A. A. [illegible] Chairman George V. Brown and Secretary Tom [illegible] they were not ready to the meeting.

While it looked for a few minutes as though another hockey war would develop, it was the general opinion of those present after adjournment that matters would adjust themselves. The fact that those four teams had many of the same players on their lists prevented any progress toward planning a new season.

All present agreed that this hockey season ought to be a banner one with so much good [illegible] scheduled. The matter of [illegible] which [illegible] was discussed [illegible] to defer [illegible] the definite [illegible] of [illegible].

YALE ENDS PRELIMINARY SEASON TODAY WITH MARYLAND STATE

New Haven, Ct., Nov. 5. Yale wound up its preliminary games by meeting Maryland State College before 12,000 people. As the visitors have defeated no formidable elevens this year the Elis expected easy victory, although no regular rushline member was started.

Al Norris began his first game of the season at centre. Behind the line Captain Aldrich led his men at left halfback, and Bill Mallory was at fullback, with George Becket running the eleven, and John Spelden was tried for the first time at right halfback. In all thirty players were told by Head Coach Tad Jones to be ready for the bout.

Of the visitors, interest was keen in the advent of Brooke Brewer whose friends have been insisting that he would outpunt Captain Aldrich and himself here against the Elis. The Yale Daily News said editorially today that it hoped that Brewer would kick the ball over the top of the Bowl.

Of the two ends, Tony Hulman who was assigned for his varsity debut, is a former Worcester Academy star. Jess Sturm, the other wing man, has blocked three kicks, followed the ball keenly and fallen on it for three touchdowns the past week.

Donald Hidden of Fitchburg who has been pushing Nemo Into hard for left tackle, was given the assignment, while Esselstyn, the former [illegible] lineman, was the other [illegible]. John Mackay, a regular guard last year, was given his first chance in starting a game this year.

For the second half, [illegible] Tad Jones planned to use [illegible] Murphy as field general, with Wight, Neidlinger and Knapp as his ball advancers.

The game was not [illegible] by the Yale crowd [illegible] [illegible] the big squad [illegible] against the Tigers [illegible] Saturday.

HARVARD-PRINCETON BATTLE BEFORE RECORD CROWD

By CHARLES E. PARKER

Princeton, N. J., Nov. 5.—Princeton's ponderous gridiron eleven ruled the favorite here today for this afternoon's initial "Big Three" clash with the sons of John Harvard

PALMER STADIUM LINEUP.

PRINCETON.	HARVARD.

For exactly one year the Princeton team has been pointing for today's Harvard conflict. The will to win from the Crimson took shape immediately after Clark Macomber, the Harvard substitute wingman, grabbed the pass that enabled the Harvard team of last Fall to tie the Tigers, and on and off the Palmer Stadium gridiron this has been the thought uppermost in the minds of Princeton football men.

Of course Princeton hoped to do other things. Its men believed not only a victory over the Crimson but victories over the other Tiger opponents were to fall to its lot this season, and when first the Navy and then Chicago disrupted the latter plan the Princeton team and the Princeton rooters suffered a real shock.

* * *

But that failed to change their aims and plans relative to the Harvard game, and, if anything, the will to win from the Crimson is stronger than ever today.

* * *

That Princeton has [illegible] the stronger array of talent [illegible] by few and the [illegible] presented the Tigers [illegible] cation [illegible].

Upon the success or [illegible] of the Tiger coaches [illegible] the latter [illegible] Princeton's chances of achieving Princeton's first victory over Harvard in ten years.

Harvard can be [illegible] to wage bitter resistance [illegible] its lesser football assets [illegible] Princeton [illegible] realize fully its possibilities every [illegible] Harvard [illegible] far beyond any ability thus far shown to match the Tigers' best.

* * *

A huge colorful gathering of partisan fans will witness the contest—probably the largest gathering ever assembled at Princeton for a Harvard game.

* * *

Many of their number arrived last night and all this morning and until the scheduled time for play New York, Philadelphia and Boston trains were pouring additional thousands into this picturesque college town, while automobiles by the hundreds were racing Princetonward over the highways leading to the Palmer Memorial Stadium.

The playing surface was not in its best condition. Recent rains had softened the turf, making the footing uncertain and causing the coaches to outfit their men in the heavier, longer-cleated football shoes.

This condition enables Princeton to capitalize its weight advantage on straight-away plays [illegible] and defensively, but it rendered [illegible] ful of success [illegible] broken field work of [illegible] and [illegible] of Princeton and [illegible] and Gratwick of Harvard and [illegible] in forward passing [illegible] the ball coming often in contact with the [illegible] and mud of the field will be less easy to handle and more difficult to control.

Recent shifts in the Crimson line-up [illegible] Harvard enthusiasts. They [illegible] Coach Fisher and his aids have had [illegible] for Harvard's first team and as few of the new [illegible] this [illegible] the first [illegible] with unusual interest.

Two weeks ago the entire right side of the Harvard [illegible] was a [illegible] combination, and except for the first game of the season [illegible] starts at centre [illegible] a tackle position.

* * *

In the case of each of the four Crimson men—Tierney, Hubbard, Ladd and Macomber—they face veteran Princetonians, and in three of the four cases weight as well as experience favor the Nassau gridders.

* * *

Many were interested in the tactics Harvard was to employ in opposing [illegible] Princeton's huge [illegible] and [illegible] a live man in the Tiger line.

The latter has had a habit of [illegible] territory in a desire to engage in open field tackling, which [illegible] and both the Navy and Chicago played upon this tendency by [illegible] play and then crossing him with an entirely different move.

[illegible] to figure in the attack [illegible] two men to guard him and what they were successful [illegible] was made by Princeton in the Navy game and only three first downs were registered by the Tigers in the Chicago contest.

It has been argued that there is little likelihood of either team showing new plays in today's battle, but the general expectation was that [illegible] would advance novel attacking formations in the course of the fray, and the first appearance of such new plays was awaited with keenest of interest.

[illegible] what the Crimson has up its sleeve is most uncertain, but [illegible] already has made use of Navy [illegible] formations, and was expected to display these and other attacking plays it has picked up from other teams or originated itself.

New York, Nov. 5.—Cornell reported to the Polo Grounds today for its game with Columbia as a 3 to 1 favorite, notwithstanding the fact Columbia boasted the heavier team.

Coach "Buck" O'Neil has specially prepared his team to defend the formations the Ithacans employed against Dartmouth, and with his big array of linemen carrying out their assignments he expected to check Cornell's rushing attack, and rely upon Koppish, Moszczenski and Anderson to break up any aerial attack Dobie may offer in the course of the contest.

The Cornell team is all confidence, for already they have taken the measure of a team that defeated Columbia, and they feel Columbia will be proportionately easy to vanquish.

Both Munns and Lechler, the Ithacans who were injured in the Dartmouth contest last week, have recovered and Munns is sure to start the contest, while Lechler will see service either as a starter or a substitute for Olney, whose play was one of the features of last week's Dartmouth game.

Coach "Bill" Parks tapered off the intensive week's training with a light signal practice yesterday afternoon, when he gave especial attention to the men who will lead off for Tufts in the opening quarter today.

With the exception of a slightly aggravated injury to Petrone received in [illegible] scrimmage and the loss of Chandler [illegible] due to a broken ankle received in the Wesleyan game, the team will be at its full strength and in the very pink of condition.

Coach Parks during the week's work has laid great emphasis upon the importance of smashing the overhead attacks of Doc Whalen's eleven. The [illegible] of Tufts to break up the [illegible] aerial [illegible] the Brown and Blue a possible victory. The weakness and the slight superior weight of the B. U. ends will be the chief obstacles in the way of the Jumbo team.

The game will be called at 2 o'clock in order to give time to the interclass events between the halves.

Says One Kid Thought Oxfords Grew on Bushes Because He Heard His Father Speak of Shoe Trees

When you buy a new pair of shoes you have about as much fun as a cross-eyed cat trying to watch a mouse with St. Vitus dance.

A new shoe is nothing but a foot press.

It's a straight jacket for your toes.

Whittier [illegible] bought a new pair of [illegible] and then wrote [illegible] "Barefoot Boy."

One little kid asked his father if [illegible] a pair of oxfords. He thought they grew on bushes because he'd heard [illegible] speak of shoe trees.

These shoe orchards are funny places. You see a clerk kneeling in front of a woman and you don't know whether he's trying a shoe on her or proposing.

One woman [illegible] pair of shoes on and said they weren't stylish because they were comfortable.

There was nothing wrong with them except they didn't hurt her.

She had to be in pain or she wasn't well dressed.

But the clerk was nice and told her to take them and if they didn't hurt her she could bring them back.

A woman always finds out what size she wears and then takes two sizes smaller.

They try to crowd a St. Bernard dog into a Pomeranian kennel.

The minute the clerk hears her shriek with pain he knows that he's fitted her O. K.

A girl will pay any price for a shoe as long as it's too small for her.

Only a green clerk will give a woman a shoe which is the right size.

If you don't fib to them about the size of their feet they're disappointed. Tell them the truth and they're insulted.

A woman will try on every pair of shoes in the store until she finds one that hurts her.

One dame will say to another: "I was just down to Smith's to get a pair of shoes, but I couldn't get a thing; the smallest size they had was a number one."

Most women don't want a fit, what they want is a convulsion.

Some dames will go into a shoe store when they ought to go into a place where they sell suitcases.

A man wants comfort when he gets a new pair of shoes and the only way he can get it is to buy them [illegible] home and leave them in the closet.

Princeton, N. J., Nov. 5.—Princeton's [illegible] for Harvard [illegible] that has not been tasted since 1911, waited [illegible] Stadium here today to claw the Crimson intruder from [illegible] submission.

Harvard's mastodon of the gridiron, still smarting under its trimming at the hands of little Centre, was primed for a battle royal and rather expected it.

Neither the Crimson nor the Orange and Black is over-confident, each feeling that the other has some new tricks up its sleeve ready to let loose in the effort to forge into and hold the lead.

* * *

Neither has opened up wide in any of the early season games, but both will be forced to show today just how much football they know.

* * *

Harvard-Princeton football encounters always develop [illegible] great battles no matter what the critics are able to find in comparative scores [illegible] early season showing.

* * *

This year the teams seem to be [illegible] matched, with the victory in either's grasp until the final whistle says that the play is over.

Coach Fisher, the Harvard mentor, was not inclined to talk much as he walked up the runway from the field surrounded by crimson clothed men and would make no predictions as to the result of the contest. "This is the hardest game of the season," he said. "All the men are in good shape, and I expect that the battle will be close and hard fought. I have no predictions to make as to the outcome."

B. C. SQUAD AT TOP FORM FOR HARD BATTLE WITH MARIETTA

With a strong reserve of eighteen men, the Marietta eleven lined up for the big battle with Boston College at Braves Field this afternoon [illegible] of handing the team from the Heights [illegible] to the Detroit knockout wallop which floored the B. C. team two weeks ago.

For a whole year Marietta emulated Detroit [illegible] of the game [illegible] college as the one big [illegible] of the year and by preparing for the battle in which it hopes by humbling the team which last year went undefeated to increase its prestige throughout the Middle West.

Marietta presented a stronger team this year than it [illegible] of six games. Marietta [illegible] suffered one defeat [illegible] won was [illegible] last Saturday over [illegible] Wesleyan [illegible] previous to the game with Boston College, Detroit University defeated the [illegible] score of 30 to 0.

The [illegible] team that Marietta played was [illegible] as strong as the [illegible] defeated. Unless we wish to think that it was [illegible] first Saturday [illegible] must be admitted that Marietta appears [illegible] to the [illegible] Detroit eleven since [illegible] 30 to 0.

That Marietta will easily topple Boston College does not seem possible from the figures that the Westerners gave out yesterday regarding their team. The whole team average [illegible] None of the linemen [illegible] pounds. If the Marietta figures are correct it is [illegible] that the [illegible] backs [illegible] victory.

Marietta lost a [illegible] game to Boston College last Fall by [illegible] score. [illegible] Westerners [illegible] were [illegible] the Yale [illegible].

[illegible] Meyers [illegible] a veteral [illegible] Matthews [illegible] Jolley and Meyers gave the [illegible] backs [illegible].

Crawford has been shifted from end to guard. As [illegible] Crawford has played a [illegible] game [illegible] and is expected to star for the Westerners.

Captain Robinson and Paden start at the halfback posts. Robinson will probably do all the forward passing as in this line he is an artist.

Wiehl [illegible] the game at quarter in place of Vickers, who has been shifted to halfback.

Knowing well that Marietta would present its strongest team against Boston College, [illegible] has spent the past week in preparing his men against [illegible] the Westerners are expected to [illegible]. Against the overhead game [illegible] in addition [illegible] the season, the [illegible] rehearsed a few new plays.

AND her own almost colorless face, still unlined and round with youth seemed to echo in its shadows the violet-blue color tones from the little nosegay that rose and fell with the breathing of her round young breast.

The stranger in the doorway, for a moment, seemed to experience some difficulty in explaining himself.

"I wonder," he finally ventured, "if I might have a look at this studio of yours?"

Long Ago Indeed

The girl with the bobbed hair seemed unable to understand him. Yet a more pointed inspection of his figure assured her he was something more than a building inspector or a mere street-beggar.

"I'm afraid I'm interrupting you," the stranger was saying. "But the truth of the matter is, this room was once—I mean that I myself lived here once, and"——

"That must have been some time ago," interrupted the girl with the bobbed hair, almost skeptically.

And her visitor remembered that, as time was reckoned in her city of unrest and change, it was a very long time ago.

Between the two big windows where his "Sentinel Wolf" had once stood, was pinned an array of girls' heads in sepia, all amazingly alike, all amazingly doll-like in their dehumanizing prettiness. Some of them, he remembered, he had seen on magazine covers, but he gave them little time or thought, for they were not to be reckoned among the links which were leading him back to the past.

Yet many other trivial details of the room, as the rain continued to beat on roof and skylight with an immeasurably sorrowful sound, he drank in hungrily and with an increasing look of abstraction in his eyes. For it seemed a very long time ago, now, since this was his home.

And as he continued to stand there, communing with his memories, confronting the days of his dead past, the youth with the averted face reached up to the piano-top for a small stringed instrument konwn as a ukulele, and sounded a not-insignificant chord or two on its wires. The woman in the smock also moved half impatiently to one of the windows, against which the rain was beating quietly and steadily.

Her visitor's rough face, which seemed to have lost its earlier russet tone, colored slightly with embarrassment. He murmured something about being very sorry, and also being grateful, and turned and walked slowly toward the door.

Feeling Old

He turned away and went slowly down the familiar worn treads of the stairs, feeling old and neutral, with abstraction in his eyes and a dull ache in his heart. He stepped out into the gray light of the late afternoon, weighed down by a vague regret for his wasted life. He wondered if it might have been different if only he had awakened earlier to his power of directing it differently.

He even wondered if he would have been happier, had things been otherwise ordained and ordered, or if his was merely the heritage of all human life, carrying at its core its guarded knowledge of failure, its hidden shadow of defeat, which men so vainly and yet so valorously seek to disguise even from themselves.

So stabilized and at the same time so disturbed was he in spirit that he decided not to look up the old friends he had been counting on looking up. Yet when, two days later, he wen back to the country, he went oddly tranquilized, unexpectedly and mysteriously at peace with his own soul.

It was the peace, he felt, the plaintively final peace which comes with life's belated acceptance of the inevitable and with the reaffirmed knowledge that the dead who are dead have been duly committed to earth. Yet back at Pine-Brae he found the spring opening up big with promise and much work on the land awaiting him. Here, too, he found plenty to take up his thoughts. . . . ..

* * *

One showery day, early in June, as he carried a broken chain to the village blacksmith, he caught sight of a heavy motor car being tooled laboriously along the wheel-rutted highway.

It was spattered with mud, its running-gear was dripping, and the transparencies in its side curtains were thinly misted with moisture from the breaths of the passengers inside. But it went on its way, lumberingly and determined.

As it drew closer to Storrow it impressed him as something migratory and exotic, as something meant for magnificence and yet plunged into unhappiness. It carried a sense of remoteness, of ponderous impatience, in its onward-moving wheels, so that the man with the chain, trudging along the wet side-path, was nettled with an opposing sense of humbleness, of being sordidly close to the soil, a mere husbandman with a peasant-like outlook on life.

And He Sees Torrie

But for one brief moment as he looked away over the wet orchard-lands, fragrant and odorous and so full of promise, he wrung a sudden consolation from that same humble nearness to earth. It brought him courage, even though it remained a courage thinly touched with pain. So he looked up, with a calmer eye, as the car lumbered past him imperiously showering his side-path with its scattering of muddy water. As he did so he caught sight of a woman's face through the misty side-windows.

It was a thin face, a milky-white face with wide-set eyes and full lips slightly touched with revolt.

And he knew it was Torrie's.

She was seated beside a small and narrow-shouldered man who looked colorless and fragile in the dark, otter-trimmed greatcoat in which he was swathed, a man who appeared ill and fretful and impatient of the delay which had befallen what must have been a holiday tour across this outlandish peninsula between Buffalo and Detroit.

Storrow realized, with an involuntary skip of the pulse, that it was Krassler, her husband, seated in the car beside her.

Yet he refused to turn and look after that mud-spattered automobile. He went on to the blacksmith shop, where he waited until his broken link was repaired. But quite often, during the next few weeks, he thought of that milky-white face with the shadowy eyes, so fleetingly glimpsed through fog-covered celluloid, softened by the misted transparency.

Then, as June slipped away and the Summer grew older, he thought of it less and less. His work on the land kept him very busy.

And as the months wore on he learned to think less often of the past.

Meet These Two Charming Young Ladies

THEY are Miss Fannie Jasper and Miss Dorothy Welles—their home address is Battlesburg, Ia., and they stand for all that is best in American life.

You may consider yourself formally introduced, after starting the interesting serial "GET-RICH-QUICK WALLINGFORD," which begins on this page Monday and in which they play so important a part.

This splendid story of the machinations of the clever confidence man and his associate, Blackie Daw, has a very human appeal; their easy victory over the credulous people of a Western town, their harvest of unearned money and their final surrender to the power of love, backed by belief in their honesty, give the serial unflagging interest.

HER OWN WAY

STORY OF A YOUNG GIRL'S STRUGGLES

By Virginia Terhune Van de Water

Copyright, 1921, Star Company

AT 4 o'clock the young man had not appeared.

Helen went up to the street and looked all about her. He was not in sight.

After waiting for twenty-minutes longer, or until an hour past the time he had named, she decided that he had ben unavoidably detained by some unforseen occurrence, or that he had forgotten her. This last possibility semed remote, as Dan had reminded her only yesterday afternoon that he would expect her to keep her appointment with him.

Turning her steps westward, Helen went out to the drive and joined the throng walking uptown. The day was perfect, not too cold, yet dry and clear. The sun was low in the West, and the Hudson, most beautiful of rivers, glistened like gold.

Helen walked on, her eyes taking in the lively scene. She recalled this morning she had longed for Slatesville. Yet, how lovely this part of New York was, and how gay and content all those people seemed!

"It is because it is home to them, and they have friends here!" she mused. "I have nobody. Even in this crowd I am as lonely as if I were out in the Desert of Sahara."

Sunset time is a homesick time, and the girl's loneliness increased. When she could endure it no longer, she walked through to Broadway at 103rd Street, and took the subway downtown.

When she entered the front door of her lodging house, a letter addressed in Elizabeth Mayo's handwriting was on the hall-table. It had evidently been left this afternoon by a messenger.

Went To Room

Helen Gorman went softly up to her room.

She did not wish Mrs. Ovington to know that she was at home yet. She closed her door noiselessly, then turned the key. She must be alone when she read what Elizabeth had to tell her.

She opened the envelope and saw that it contained a sealed telegram. With it was a half-sheet of paper on which Elizabeth had written:

"Dear Nell—This telegram arrived this morning. It would be well for you to notify the sender of your present address. Had this come twenty-four hours later you would not have received it, for I am leaving my apartment early tomorrow morning. I am to be married on Tuesday and sail for Europe on that day—much earlier than planned.

"I am sorry you could not see Tom and let him tell you of my arrangements. Anyway, I shall hope to see you in my home—a real, worth-while home—when I return in the Fall. Until then, try to be less censorious of—

"Your friend, BETTY."

Sailing for Europe? She and Tom were to be married as soon as this! Then they were going abroad!

The room seemed to reel and rock before Helen's eyes. She dropped into a chair and buried her face in her hands.

Married! It could not be true! And only yesterday Tom had asked her to go for a drive with him this afternoon. She had refused, even though he had urged her to see him.

Now she knew why he had wanted to see her—to tell her the news. Elizabeth, knowing of Helen's disapproval of marriages for money, had delegated Tom to notify her friend of their coming wedding.

Had Helen not refused his invitation, she would have heard from his own lips of his betrothal. Tom Andrews and she would have driven out into the country this beautiful afternoon and he would have explained everything to her. It would have been impossible for Helen to tell him the truth in return—that Elizabeth did not love him.

The Demon Jealousy

Helen had insisted to him once that Betty cared for Willard. Of course, Tom did not believe her statement. Even then he had Elizabeth's promise to marry him.

With the excited imagination of jealousy, Helen Gorman jumped to the conclusion that the "case" that Elizabeth Mayo had been nursing lately was one of Tom's patients. The nurse had spoken of going abroad next Summer with this patient, who was, she said, the aunt of the little girl who had died early in the Winter. But she had never intimated that either the child or the woman was Dr. Andrews' patient.

So Betty had lied when she spoke of traveling with the invalid. She had tried to hide the truth from everybody while she and the young physician—who had, as Molly Dater had said, "oodles of money"—were planning to steal off in this underhanded way.

This is what Tom had wanted to tell Helen! His voice had been as happy as if poor Luther Willard had not gone away crushed and disappointed.

Tom had no heart—except, perhaps, what he had given to Betty. And she had no heart. They were a well-matched pair!

Suddenly Tom Andrews' face was flashed upon the retina of Helen Gorman's memory—the eyes that had looked into hers with an expression that had made her heart beat madly.

For a wild instant she felt that she must see him, that this dreadful thing could not be happening to her — that the man she loved could not be going away with a woman who did not love him.

She began to walk up and down the room, her fingers twisting one another cruelly.

She had been unhappy before, but never as wretched as she was at this moment.

Of course, she reminded herself, she had been sure for several days that this couple were engaged, that they had been deceiving her for weeks. But hope dies hard, and until the engagement was an acknowledged fact Helen might have persuaded herself that she was mistaken.

Now, however, she knew.

To Be Continued.

Bachelor Girl's Reflections

BY HELEN ROWLAND

Copyright, 1921, by The Wheeler Syndicate, Inc.

HEAVEN may be a woman's club, but it takes two sexes to make a WORLD—interesting.

Love is not on the wane, until a girl stops reproving a man for staying so late and begins reproaching him for calling so late.

When a man is traveling toward the woman he loves, time goes SO slowly that he is usually tempted to while it away with a few flirtations along the road.

The ideal modern "caveman" is one who first takes the precaution to find out what a woman wants to do, and then "masterfully" orders her to do it.

Nothing so quickly soaks all the color out of a man's love as steeping it in brine. "Little Sallie Waters, sitting in the sun, sighing and crying for a nice young man" was exceedingly foolish, when she might have gotten one so much more easily by sitting in the moonlight and smiling for him.

A girl with a ready wit, a superior soul, and a self-reliant manner can always take care of herself in this world—and the chances are that she'll always HAVE to.

Every white man in a savage country knows that when the aboriginal chief offers him gifts he is not expected to take them; and every man who is free, white and twenty-one should know that when one woman urges him to "be awfully nice" to another woman, she is still savage at heart.

Virtue may be its own reward—but so is bigamy.

The Rhyming Optimist

By Aline Michaelis

WE have come to the days when the sun hides his rays, when the wind sends a chill to our bones, and the coal barons grin while the orders pour in, for their hearts are hard as the stones. We are fond of the snow and the icicles, so at home by the fireside we stay, and we think it is tough we can't buy an ear-muff or a red-flannel undie today. When we venture to go where the wild breezes blow we don all the coats we possess; we wear three undersuits and a pair of hip-boots, for that's how the husky chaps dress. We've read many a tip on evading the grip, and we flee from lumbago's embrace; but the first maid we meet as we haste down the street wears stockings constructed of lace! She is slender and frail, as she faces the gale she is muffled in furs to her nose; she wears hat, gloves and veil, right in every detail, but her ankles are clad in lace hose. Taking note of her plight, we are sure she's not bright, so we hasten to go to her aid; we approach her with care, as her mind's not at all there, and say: "May I speak, little maid? Are you not indiscreet, coming out in this sleet while the weather winds whistle so shrill? Say, does tac douloureux hold no terrors for you, are you never afraid of a chill?" Then we hear the remark: "Say, where do you park since the year eighteen-seventy-two; honest, don't you suppose I can tell that my toes are frozen most painfully blue? Though the mercury drop clear to zero and stop and the weather be perfectly vile. Even then, figure please, though my poor tootsies freeze, do you think I will be out of style?"

BORED BY HIS WIFE

—By Beatrice Fairfax—

HE thinks he's a hero! His wife bores him. He confesses it frankly. They don't enjoy the same people or the same things. He came to me the other day and put his case curtly and frankly.

"Bess doesn't mean a thing to me. She likes living in the country and sitting at home night after night."

"Doesn't she like having company in the house?" I asked.

"Yes, but I like going around—dancing"——

"Haven't you a phonograph and a few dance records?"

"Yes," he answered impatiently. "But I like the restaurants—lights, gayety, a crowd. I'm bored to death hanging around the house and seeing the same old faces. I like excitement. She doesn't."

"What do you suppose the children think of your arrangements?" I asked.

"What can they think? If it weren't for them, I suppose that we'd separate—but I've got to think of them."

"To think of them!" I cried, unable to contain myself longer. "Do you think they're getting ne beautiful ideal of the meaning of home and marriage? Do you think they respect either of you? Do you think they're learning anything about the give and take of life or the need of adjustment if human beings are to live together in harmony or there is to be any real oneness in marriage?"

"Well, isn't it better this way than if they had to face an open breach?

"If you go to all this trouble to avoid scandal, why don't you go to a little trouble to seek adjustment"—I suggested. But I was interrupted.

"Say, don't tell me to adjust myself. I don't want to. This is the age of the individual and I think I'm giving up enough when I think of my reputation and my children's future and what the children's future and what the world would say if I gave it half a chance. No, sir, I'm not playing the game half as crooked as most folks . . . but I might have known you wouldn't give me any credit!" Well—do you "give him any credit?"

Hints for the Household

Do not put much garnish on a dish which has to be served.

* * *

Vinegar rubbed over raw meat will keep it fresh and render it more digestible.

* * *

Yolks of eggs may be kept fresh by putting them in a basin with enough cold water to cover. Place a saucer on top of the basin and put in cold dark place until required.

* * *

Ammonia is the best cleaner for soiled irons. Saturate a soft cloth with the liquid and rub the surface of the iron while it is hot. Follow by waxing thoroughly, and a gloss will be imparted that will make the work easier.

* * *

If dried fruit is required quickly, the best way to prepare it is to pour boiling water over it, and add a little carbonate of soda. Stand for an hour, then cook. It will be as tender as if soaked all night, and not so much sugar will be required.

OVER YOUR SHOULDER

LITTLE STORY ON BEING NEIGHBORLY

By Ilse L. Callman.

"I USED to think that any fellow who folded up his paper to a one-column size so that no one else could read it was a crab," remarked the pleasant-faced young man, in polite parlance, as he adjusted the green-shaded reading lamp more to his liking.

"He probably is," replied his wife, pulling threads out of a handkerchief square and at the same time inserting other threads of contrasting color. "It certainly is annoying to be on a car and get a glimpse of a headline like 'BIG FI' and not be able to tell if there has been a 'Big Fight in Cabinet,' a 'Big Fire in Loop' or a 'Big Fine for Tax Dodgers.' I, for my part, always spread out my paper when I have one, so that any one who wishes may 'run and read.' I hope you're not going to be one of those poor fellows, dear, who's afraid to share his three cents' worth."

"I hope so, too, honey. My sentiments, up to now, coincided exactly with yours.

"But now—well, I'm not so sure it's a good system. Yesterday morning two girls sat down next to me. I was reading my paper, as usual. Suddenly the one next to me was attracted by a photo on the page I was reading of some woman who had won a divorce. She leaned toward me to read the name, then turned to her friend excitedly: 'I thought I knew that face,' she declared.

And Julie Agreed

"'It's Mrs. Pierce! Imagine, Emily! Whoever would have thought—I wonder what was the trouble.' She turned again to my paper, and I in the kindness of my heart held it turned to that page so that she might satisfy her curiosity. However, there was quite a story about it, and as [illegible] to know how busy I've been at the office, Julia, I turned the page, making a mental note to give her the paper when I was through with it, so that she might read all about that divorce case. Being a married man, I know, of course, how keen women are for that sort of thing."

"Of course," icily agreed his Julia. But he went on:

"The thought is father to the deed and so when I had finished glancing through my paper I turned to the girl and offered it to her. 'Sir,' she said, 'I want you to know I'm a respectable girl. Please discontinue your attentions, or I shall report you to the conductor!'"

"The idea! Such ignorance!" exclaimed his wife.

"However, when I cooled down, I decided I would not let one incident like that discourage me from being neighborly and kind. So tonight, when I noticed a young man next to me gleaning the news from my paper, I spread it out so that he could read it the more easily.

"He seemed friendly enough, however, and he had a charming manner. Said he was a stranger in town. Didn't know anyone. Had a dear little wife back in Pinckneyville. Life was gloomy without her. Was going to bring her up here next week. Could hardly wait. All that sort of thing. I was just about to give up my card and tell him to bring the wife up to the house when she arrived and that you would be glad to make it pleasant for her, when he said:

Very, Very Odd

"'Say, old chap, funny thing. Got so tied up with work today didn't notice passing of time at all. And first thing it was after four o'clock, and I hadn't gone to the bank as I had planned. Wonder if you could accommodate me with a yellowback until tomorrow? I'm not known up here, and I'd rather ask a friend like you than a stranger.'

"You didn't give it to him, dear?"

"I didn't," replied her husband, reminiscently. "But to be honest, it wasn't my fault. I was just reaching my hand in my pocket for my bill case, when he suddenly said, 'Excuse me, friend. I see a fellow over there I don't want to miss.' And off he went like a shot.

"Just then old Judge Turner caught up with me. 'Since when, Ainsley,' he wanted to know, 'have you taken up with the slickers?'

"'What d' y' mean, slickers, Judge?' I asked him.

"'Why, that fellow you were just with—stranger in town; peachy little wife, wants to bring her up to big city next week; forgot to go to bank, won't you cash a check for him.'

"I stared at him. 'How do you know all this?'

"'He served two years because I knew all this. He is one of the slickest slickers in the business. Left you rather suddenly, didn't he—when he saw me coming?'

"So you see, dear," her husband concluded slowly, "I've almost decided to fold my daily paper to a one-column size with the rest of the crabs."

"Perhaps it would be better," agreed the wife thoughtfully.

Stocks Close Heavy; Bonds Are Active; Liberty Issues Sell at New High

FINANCE AND BUSINESS

By B. C. FORBES

The most scandalous statements are made by those who ought to know the facts concerning the ongoings which preceded the recent failure of the New York and Philadelphia Stock Exchange firm of Chandler Bros. & Co. The shortage of the firm runs into millions—far more than could possibly have been lost by conducting the brokerage business on high-grade lines.

* * *

I am told, however, that several of those whose funds were appropriated by Chandler Bros. & Co. are determined to do everything within their power to land the guilty ones in prison. Case after case of shocking misuse of funds has been related to me. Some of the charges made are almost unbelieveable. If one small fraction of the wrongdoing alleged can be proven in court, prison doors should swing open.

* * *

One particularly ugly feature of the scandal is that quite a number of "insiders" were tipped off months in advance that the firm was in financial difficulties, and this gave them plenty of time and opportunity to get out before the crash came. I know one town alone where the losses suffered by customers runs into very large figures. Some of the victims declare emphatically that their accounts were handled in flagrant violation of legitimate, established principles.

For the New York Stock Exchange governors and everyone else occupying places of responsibility in the financial community to gloss over such disgraceful episodes as those connected with the Chandler Bros. & Co. failure, and to utter not one word of condemnation, is not the way to establish the confidence of the public in the New York Stock Exchange, its governors, its members, or in Wall Street.

* * *

The whole disgraceful scandal, however, promises to be exposed through pending litigation by victims who have suffered heavy losses such as are never entailed by anyone dealing with an honestly-conducted stock exchange firm.

Perhaps it would be well to add that the number of swindlers among the members of the New York Stock Exchange is extremely small. In fact, one feels justified in assuming that the admission of any firm to membership in the New York Stock Exchange is evidence that its members are honest, honorable men.

* * *

Copper stocks, steels, leather and shoe stocks, public utility stocks and mail-order stocks are among those which ought to do better under the change that is taking place in business conditions.

* * *

The gobbling up of American oil properties and companies by the British-controlled Royal Dutch interests is exciting warm discussion in financial and oil circles. So, too, are some of the other oil deals, reorganizations, mergers, etc. The largest deal now attracting attention is the selling of the Union Oil Company of Delaware to the Royal Dutch. The former company owns a large block (reported to be 27 per cent.) of the stock of the Union Oil Company of California, and there is much speculation as to whether the California Company will also be corraled by the powerful foreign octopus. A number of the California Company's stockholders bitterly oppose such a scheme, and are petitioning other stockholders to join them in pooling their stock so as to guard against it.

A lot of piquantly interesting financial history is understood to lie underneath the conduct of the affairs of the Union Oil Company of Delaware. Some very important financial names are identified with the care of this enterprise, and a few of them are said to have lost a good deal of sleep over some of the things that have taken place. The mergering of the company with the foreign combination is regarded as a convenient way to close the record.

* * *

We hear much about the possibility of reducing railway freight rates. How many changes in individual rates do you think have been filed with the Interstate Commerce Commission? More than a million.

* * *

Don't be astonished or alarmed if statements on business conditions become less optimistic shortly. Most leaders will probably delay making important decisions until the Washington conference is well under way and some idea can be obtained as to how the cat is likely to jump. At least for a brief period, rather pronounced irregularity may be expected both in business and in the stock market—although the chances are that bonds will continue to recover.

At that, however, merchants are probably justified in counting upon enjoying very brisk Christmas trade.

* * *

My, but the United States government is an up-to-date, business-like organization. It has caught up with its work so thoroughly that letters are now being sent out by the Treasury Department asking for explanations of items contained in income tax statements for the year—1920? No, 1919? No, the Treasury Department is up to the year 1918. This week I received a demand for an explanation of two items aggregating $110 which the Treasury Department figured I had received in the form of unreported income during the year 1918. Also, it wanted a detailed list of the huge sum of $90 which I had included under the heading of "miscellaneous" contributions for charitable purposes.

* * *

Instead of feeling annoyed over such pettiness, I suppose that the attitude we all ought to have is one of thankfulness that the Treasury Department is combing the country for income tax delinquents and delinquencies with such a fine comb. If the department scrutinizes every tax return with such care, and can discover anything like all the unwarranted practices indulged in by income tax payers or dodgers—Secretary of the Treasury Mellon should encounter no difficulty in showing a surplus next year.

OILS REMAINED THE MARKET LEADERS

Steels Are Weak and Rails Steady; Price Range Narrow in New York

By W. H. ROSS,
Financial Editor.

Stocks were heavy in New York at the close, most of the leaders showing losses. Oils were the most aitive issues ond irregular all the morning. Rails remained firm and steels got to a lower level. Motors failed to retain first-hour firmness. Trading was without outstanding feature. Chandler was a strong stock, gaining 1 1-8. California Petroleum ended 2⅛ Steel Foundry also. Among weakest stocks were Famous Players, International Harvester, Pacific Oil, and Lackawanna Steel. They were down from one to two points. There was a slight rally at the close and Mexican Petroleum was up a fraction.

German marks descended to a new record low.

IRREGULAR AT START.

The market was irregular as to changes at the opening and had a downward tendency. When the session was half over losses were in the majority and the list looked rather weak. The movement was slow and the range narrow. Trading was of less volume during the forenoon than for several days. Oils, coppers and sugars were mixed in trend in early trading, while steel, shipping, tire equipment and tobacco issues were heavy. Rails were very quiet, but steady, while motors displayed a little strength. The best showing was made by a number of specialties. Jones Brothers Tea sold at a new high for the year, advancing a couple of points. Burns Brothers went up more than two and Associated Dry Goods made a fractional gain.

BONDS WERE ACTIVE.

Houston was a strong oil, it being anounced that it had brought in a 7,000-arrel well. Bonds continued active and comanded as much attention as stocks. Several Liberty Issues sold at new 1921 highs. There was not much disposition on the part of traders to extend commitments at the week-end. Short covering has considerably changed technical aspects. In the main sentiment was bullish. This was chiefly because of the reduction of Federal Reserve rediscount rates. Cheaper money is expected next week. Funds are accumulating and an increased demand for all kinds of issues with good investment rating is looked for. The public is showing more desire for bonds than stocks and quotations for the latter are being regulated almost wholly by the operations of professional speculators.

MIXED MOVEMENT TO PRICES IN BOSTON

The Boston market was irregular from start to close, but most of the leaders showed strength. Waldorf was the local feature, advancing 1⅞ to a new 1921 high. It was unusually active. Edison rights and American Telephone also sold at new highs. Among strongest stocks were Osceola, Waltham Watch preferred and Boston Elevated preferred. They were up a point or more. Declines were fractional.

Among weak issues were Carson Hill, National Leather, North Butte, East Butte, Swift & Co., Swift International, Libby, American Woolen common, American Sugar, Ventura, United Fruit, Boston Elevated and Mohawk.

The Curb market had a strong tone this morning, with Alpha, Bagdad, Boston and Montana, Eureka and Mutual mist in evidence. Gains included Alpha 1 cent at 40 cents, Tip Top 1 cent at 5 cents, Colorado Extension 1 cent at 65 cents, Daddy 4 cents at 11 cents, Eureka 2 cents at 47 cents, Palisade 3 cents at 17 cents, Verde Mines 2 cents at 22 cents and Iron Cap ¼ at 6¼. Boston and Montana was off 5 cents at 95 cents and Mutual 2 cents at 57 cents.

Cotton Market Opening

New York, Nov. 5.—Near months were supported early by a demand for cotton at the opening today, while later position eased off as a result of Southern selling. The market as a whole was quiet and after the opening, which was 8 points higher to 7 points lower, declined about 5 points under last night's close on leading positions. Spot concerns were moderate buyers on the recession. Opening prices were: Dec., 18.46; Jan., 18.23; March, 18.10; May, 17.82; July, 17.38.

Wall Street Briefs

All exchanges in New York will be closed on Tuesday next, being election day.

According to a Chicago estimate, Marshall Field & Co. do an annual business of from $400,000,000 o $500,000,000, and average net profits of about 15 per cent.

The application for the New York Stock Exchange listing of $10,000,000 Virginia Iron, Coal and Coke Co. common stock merely represents necessary changing of name of present "capital" stock to "common stock."

October exports of oil from Mexico totaled approximately 14,000,000 barrels, or 2,000,000 less than they were for September.

Endicott Johnson factories are running on full time, employing more than 13,000 persons, and turning out shoes at the rate of 95,000,000 pairs a day.

The War Finance Corporation authorized export loans totalling $863,000 yesterday.

NO SMOKES, BUT LOTS OF BOOZE IN N'ORLEANS

Spillane Finds Once Widest Open City Now Going Hard to Other Extreme

By RICHARD SPILLANE.

On the Road, Nov. 5.—New Orleans, which used to be the widest-open town in America, has gone to some extremes of restriction. Royal street used to be lined with gambling houses that were wide open and were looked upon as tolerantly as were saloons.

Vice of various kinds and characters was accepted as something difficult if not impossible to stamp out and better to regulate or confine to a prescribed area than to scatter widely.

If report is true, you can get action at the faro table or the roulette wheel in the Crescent City today, but you have no chance to win, for all the games are crooked and all the houses are conducted "under cover."

PLENTY TO DRINK.

On Sunday you cannot buy a cigar or a package of cigarettes, for all the tobacco stores are compelled under the ordinances to close.

But you can get booze, bad booze, from bootleggers around some of the hotels and you can get a cocktail at some of the high class restaurants if you are known, and you can have some choice wines, too, if you care to pay the price.

Anyone who told George Howard, John A. Morris, Jubal Early or General Beauregard in the days when the drawings of the Louisana Lottery were publicly conducted in one of the principal structures of the city that the time was coming when it would be illegal to sell a drink or a smoke in the care-free city by the Mississippi's shore would be thought crazy.

And yet the statues of Early and Beauregard look down today upon an officially "dry" and on Sunday an officially tobaccoless N'Orlins.

HOPELESS FISHING.

There is a modest little stream called the White River that meanders through Indianapolis. That is it is modest as a general thing, but once every ten years or so it goes on a spree, overflows its banks, does a lot of damage and then, rather ashamed of its conduct, resumes its former placid and orderly habits.

The White River deserves attention on various accounts, but on none more than because plain, common-sense citizens do things along its shores that are just as curious as the periodical sprees of the river itself.

For instance, you may see an earnest gentleman standing on the bank and casting as if his well-being depended upon the distance he threw his hook and line. Day after day, week after week and year after year Indiana disciples of Izaak Walton gather on the banks and cast. Now, the memory of man does not go back to the time any one of these earnest and assiduous sportsmen caught a fish, but nevertheless they cast and they find great joy in their casting, and they brag about their casts as followers of golf do about their drives or their putts.

Almost as prominent on the banks of the River White as the casters who never fish are the horse shoe pitchers who never shod a horse. Pitching horse shoes is a thrilling affair with an Indianian. There is a space set aside in the park by the river bank for the horse shoe devotees. They cannot get enough play in daylight, so the park commissioners have installed electric lights in the horse shoe pitching "courts."

A gifted horse shoe pitcher is looked upon with as much respect in Indiana as if he were Booth Tarkington, Tom Marshall or David Gibson. The trainers and "seconds" of the champion and near-champion pitchers growl and kick about the "delivery" of the opponent of their charges with a vigor and earnestness that equals similar bickering on the baseball diamond or in the prize ring. Horse shoes are weighed and examined just as carefully as a pugilist's seconds examine boxing gloves, and when a pitching contest is on, the whole town (or a least the sporting element) is all "het up."

Scientific gentlemen have been studying long and earnestly to discover why it is the White River goes crazy once in every ten years. All sorts of theories have been advanced without commanding much respect. So far no one has suggested that the river simply breaks loose in its impatience with fishermen who cast but never catch fish and sportsmen who put in their days and nights pitching horse shoes while never shoeing a horse.

WALL ST. GOSSIP

By MONITOR

NEW YORK, Nov. 5.—Although trading in stocks Friday was in moderate volume, with a turnover of approximately 600,000 shares, the undertone was generally firm and profit-taking made only a trivial impression. Fractional setbacks occurred in the domestic oils, and Mexican Petroleum closed at a net loss of nearly two points as a result of a reaction from a strong early spurt. The rails, steels and equipments were irregular. A few specialties showed gains, corn products and Jones Tea making new high levels for the present upward movement. Rubber and tire stocks were surprisingly steady in the face of announcements of price cuts. Allied Chemical responded favorably to the announcement that the Senate committee had voted affirmatively on the bill to extend the emergency tariff on dyestuffs into the early part of the coming year.

THIS week's moderate gain brings the Federal Reserve ratio up to the new high record of 71 per cent. The improvement is due chiefly to the continued increase in gold holdings as the deposit and note liabilities show little change. The most favorable feature of the statement is the notable improvement in the position of the reserve banks of Dallas, Richmond and Minneapolis, which recorded sharp gains owing to the reduction in regional borrowings.

THE stock market, relatively speaking, is in a state of eclipse at present owing to the breadth and activity of the investment section. Liberty bonds and Victory notes continue strong and there were further advances in the better class of foreign issues.

STRENGTH was general at the opening of the market. Baldwin Locomotive, U. S. Steel and many specialties made new high prices for the movement. Profit-taking brought first irregularity and in the concluding half hour positive weakness in the general list.

MEXICAN PETROLEUM advanced above 108, but floor traders thought they detected signs of inside selling and offered stock in large quantities. A three point reaction followed. This movement, like the others in the list during the day, was due wholly to the operations of professionals.

WHEN the general market was weak in the last hour Haskell & Barker and Pullman both advanced on a revival of the merger report. The rise excited some interest, as there have been reports of a considerable short interest in both stocks since the merger story was denied last week.

THERE is said to have been another unexpected change in the motor car industry. Sales, both immediate and prospective, have increased, particularly in this city. Closed cars are difficult to obtain, and most of the leading figures in the industry predict a very large business next year. This is responsible for some of the buying which has taken place in some of these issues.

THE Cerro de Pasco Copper Corporation has called for redemption at 105, $140,000 of its ten-year sinking fund 8 per cents, which were issued January 1 this year. This action has caused a great deal of adverse comment, not only because of the present selling price of the bonds, which is approximately 112, but because the indenture contains a conversion clause which it has never been profitable for the holder of the bonds to exercise. Among bond men there was a general feeling that this action would result in destroying the market for the bonds except at the new price of 105.

IT was reported last week that the Kelly Springfield Tire Company was about to announce a reduction in tire prices. This report was denied officially. The company announces the following price cuts. Cords, 20 per cent; fabric, 10 per cent.; caterpillar trucks, 15 per cent.; standard trucks, 10 per cent.; tubes, 18 to 20 per cent. The announcement was followed by some selling of the stock, but these offerings were taken for strong interests. The company long since disposed of its high cost inventories and its present product is made from low cost materials which, it is understood, show a satisfactory profit at the prices announced today.

THE Pacific Oil Company statement made public Friday was disappointing in view of the reports which had been circulated. Net before charges for the third quarter is $3,627,254, the equivalent of 93 cents per share on the stock. The annual dividend rate is $4, consequently earnings for this quarter are insufficient to meet dividend requirements. This is a wide variation from the rumors circulated last week that the earnings were such that an increase in the dividend rate to $5 was considered probable. For the nine months the company reports gross earnings of $24,525,098. Net profits [illegible] surplus $11,263,851.

IT has become a by-word among professional traders that it is impossible to obtain profits in the present market. The announcement that the Exchange will be closed November 8, election day, and November 11, Armistice Day, consequently was received with loud cheers.

RECENT strength in Kresge stock was partly explained when the company reported sales for October of $5,180,315, as compared with $4,531,618 in the same month last year, an increase of 14.51 per cent.

CORN PRODUCTS REFINING advanced to a new high record for the year on the announcement that an agreement has been reached by the officials of the government and the executives of the company by which the sale of the National Starch Company has been postponed until January 1. The floating supply of this stock in the Street is reported to have been greatly reduced during recent months by investment buying, hence traders are not inclined to follow its fluctuations in either direction very far.

DIRECTORS of the American Smelting and Refining Company met and declared the regular quarterly dividend of 1¾ per cent. on the preferred stock of that company.

ANOTHER RISE IN OIL IS PREDICTED

Expert Bases His Statement on Increased Demand, According to Evans

By C. B. EVANS

Chicago, Nov. 5.—A breeze comes up out of the Southwest laden with the fragrance of petroleum and Chicago nostrils are dilating.

For the moment traders and investors in this city disregard the odor of decay that is wafted to them on the wings of 42½ one hundredths of one cent for German marks. Among the advices from Oklahoma and Texas regarding the oil business is the statement of a man standing high as an expert who has been made familiar in past years with the use of overalls and rubber boots, who has seen the ups and downs of the business and now finds it staple, like the trade in steel or vegetables.

He confirms all the best that has been said regarding the outlook for oil. He states that the demand has increased notably, specifying gasoline and fuel oil, the latter being more and more used by factories.

PREDICTS ANOTHER ADVANCE.

It is his opinion, too, that before long there will be another advance in prices. This prediction is based on present experience in the business and many collateral and contributory facts. Exports, too, are increasing, furnishing, however, to the ordinary observer little light as to the methods of payment and how pauperized Europe can afford such luxuries.

When we think of the richest oil fields in the United States, our mental vision goes over Oklahoma and Texas, but they are only a part of the big game in the West. The large companies operating there are also in Wyoming, and there is a steady and essential connection between its oily deposits and the business to the South.

For this purpose Casper and Galveston are not far apart, so complete is the eqipment of pipe lines and other machinery. And some of the best oils are produced in Wyoming. The authority above referred to speaks in the strongest terms of the brilliant prospects of that unit in the oil territories of the United States.

BUYERS STILL CONFIDENT.

The stocks of these companies have acted rather lazily since the recent advance, but the confidence of buyers here has not abated. "I do not dare," is a powerful element in the minds of buyers of all kinds of stocks.

It is notable, however, that in this city half a dozen specialties in various lines are moving up rapidly. The buying is based on the assumed merits of the issues and not on the decline in the rates for money, which has had mighty little effect on any class of stocks.

Under ordinary conditions the reduction in the discount rates of the Federal Reserve Banks would be a tremendous stimulus to stock trading, but this time we have only a lift in bonds, a handsome one to be sure. The gap between securities considered perfectly safe and the last equation in a corporation's issues is not easily bridged in a time like the present. One might guess that this feat will not be performed so long as the paradox of Mexican Central confronts the market.

Some of our best observers say that the stock market is in an extraordinary strong technical position and also strong in the essential facts going to make up values, but listening to the quietly-uttered statements of seasoned business men and glancing across the Atlantic, the possible purchase in many cases immediately becomes impossible.

BEGINNING GOOD MARKET.

Purchasers of Chicago specialties are simply buying certain stocks that they know are selling far below value as tested by ordinary experience, and this is one of the best beginnings for a good market.

But some are asking how long any bull market can last with wheat selling below a dollar. Here surely is a fundamental matter. A dollar is enough for wheat if other things are correspondingly low, but think of the large number of commodities that should yet be forced down before we can expect an adjustment of factory and store and labor to farm.

Nor are bankers in this part of the country disposed to relax their purse strings very much to provide funds for operating in stocks, even though ten of the twelve Federal Reserve banks have cut their rates. They have too many loan accounts on their books which stand for such slow assets as a farm, though not directly loaned on the security of farm lands.

One of the lessons of the past year or two is the old one of the superiority of quickly marketable security. Certain of our wisest bankers are entirely willing that the government shall place its funds on the securities now offered by banks handling farmers they can afford the low rates that have been fixed by Washington.

Nine tenths of a mile long, the train consisted of 110 full cars of wheat, a water car and a caboose, in addition to the engine. The weight of the train was 6,868 tons.

NUMBER OF IDLE EXPECTED TO JUMP SOON

Unemployment Likely to Increase in January, Hoover Tells Conference

(By Associated Press.)

New York, Nov. 5.—Machinery is being set up by the Standing Committe of the Conference on Unemployment for the most exhaustive study of the fundamental problems of unemployment ever undertaken in the United States, Secretary of Commerce Hoover, the chairman, announced at a conference of the commitee.

Mr Hooverand Matthew Woll, vice-president of the American Federation of Labor, agreed that although the number of unemployed has decreased in recent weeks, the pendulum is due for a swing back toward depression. Both predicted a greater measure of unemployment and considerable suffering during January and February, the normally poor business months.

Colonel Arthur Woods, chairman of the committee named at the Washington unemployment conference to coordinate the relief activities of municipalities, reported that 180 cities already had set up, or were setting up machinery to meet the unemployment wave. All will be ready for the predicted depression the first of next year, he said.

Three of the chief phases on which the study of permanent relief will centre were outlined by Mr. Hoover as:

"First, a study of the causes and means of averting the great unemployment depressions that come as a result of the 'business cycle.'

"Second, a study of methods of regulating public works so that they will provide employment when other business is slack.

"Third, a study of means of providing relief—food, shelter and jobs to the unemployed."

It was the opinion of committee members, Mr. Hoover said, that European schemes of governmental insurance for the unemployed did not fit into the American scheme of things. The committee's efforts will be turned in another direction, he said.

Gain in Railroad Income

The Bureau of Railway Economics reports for September that the net operating income for 183 out of 203 class 1 roads was $79,484,869, against $70,022,666 for the corresponding 1920 month. Operating revenues were $462,213,494 against $574,507,804, and operating expenses $351,977,918 against $477,079,822, the percentage decrease for the former being 19.5 per cent. and for the latter 26.2 per cent.

Copper Sales Increase

Copper sales increased in the latter part of this week and large producers would not accept 13 cents a pound for November and December deliveries. As a rule 13¼ is the price asked for December metal and export business has been done on that basis.

Government Wool Sale

At the government wool auction held in Boston this week about 95 per cent. of offerings were sold and prices for medium grades showed nearly 10 per cent. advance on the average. The demand for such wool reflects a tendency to wear clothing of coarser texture.

Road Expands Payroll

The Pennsylvania Railroad now has more employed than at any time since March last. In the month ending October 16 it added 7,401, and on that date it had 207,249 names on its payroll.

Bank Clearings Decrease

Dun's weekly compilation of bank clearings show an aggregate of $6,831,650,000, a decrease of 3.6 per cent. from last year. Outside of New York there was a decrease of 8.1 per cent. from a year ago.

Food Cost Decreased

The Department of Labor reports that in twelve principal cities the retail cost of food decreased from 1 to 4 per cent. in the month ended October 15.

Railroad Items

For the first nine months of this year St. Louis & San Francisco's net operating income amounted to $12,955,384, as against only $5,603,692 in the corresponding period of 1920.

The New York, New Haven & Hartford Railroad has asked authority to assume mortgage liability of $85,000 in the purchase of land by the company.

The Central Vermont Railway has been granted authority to pledge not exceeding $147,000 of refunding mortgage 5 per cent. gold bonds as part collateral security for a government loan. It may also pledge not exceeding $24,000 of similar bonds for the same purpose.

Northwestern's loadings in October decreased 2,807 carloads to 167,036.

BIG FUEL SAVING SEEN IN POWER DISTRIBUTION

Electrification Survey of Boston-Washington Area Completed by Experts

By Associated Press.

Washington, Nov. 5.—Secretary Fall today submitted to President Harding, "As a contribution of the Department of the Interior to the common welfare," the analysis made by the geological survey of a comprehensive system for generating and distributing electricity to transportation lines and industries in the North Atlantic coast region between Boston and Washington. The survey was authorized by Congress.

The engineers who made the survey reported that 970 miles of 220,000 volt lines and five times that mileage in 110,000 volt lines would be needed.

The 1,200 miles of wire now carrying 33,000 volts and over would be operated as simple distribution lines for local industries.

This transmission net work and its sub-stations would require $104,000,000 by 1930, the report said, in which year the total investment would be $1,109,564,000.

Electrification of the Boston-Washington area, according to the report, would save 50,000,000 tons of coal annually by 1930 or $190,000,000 in fuel expenditures, while electrification of the railroads would save "11 to 19 per cent. on their investment."

"The North Atlantic coast region, to which it is proposed to supply more and cheaper electric current, was selected for this study because its industries and railroads have the maximum requirements for power," it continued. "Unfortunately, this region is not blessed with the abundance of waterpower that is possessed by the Pacific Coast States, so that the plan of power production includes large steam plants at tidewater or on rivers large enough to furnish sufficient condensing water and hydro-electric power plants."

In his letter to the President Secretary Fall referred "to the obvious fact that it is by multiplying our man-power by machines that American labor can best meet the competition of cheap foreign labor."

LEDOUX STORY LED TO CHECK FOR 'SALLIES'

Manufacturer Sent Contribution to Fund After Reading Article in Boston American

How the story in the Boston American on Urbain G. Ledoux's invasion of the Copley-Plaza led a Boston manufacturer to contribute to the Salvation Army was told at the Salvation Army Maintenance Fund drive luncheon. The letter, which follows, was read by G. B. Johnson, president of the R. H. White Company. The writer was G. L. Hamilton, a manufacturer of No. 394 Atlantic avenue.

"The first of this week I received your letter regarding appeal for the Salvation Army. I have been a contributor to the Salvation Army for a good many years, but with business conditions as they have been with me for the past year I did not feel that I could afford to contribute at this time, and to tell the truth your letter was thrown in the waste basket.

"In reading today's Boston American I read the article that I attach and after reading this I am enclosing my check and wish I could send more. I send this article to you for the reason that I have had quite a good many years of advertising experience and I believe that there are a good many men that when reading the comparison that this article shows, will gladly contribute to the good work of the Salvation Army.

"I believe that if this article could be used in connection with the present campaign of the Salvation Army that nothing could show the possible contributors the work that the Salvation Army does in any stronger manner than this article and it will get under the skin of a good many men that might turn down an ordinary appeal I hereby suggest for the reason that what the Army did in this case hit me betwen the eyes and I therefore send my check, even though I had to go through my waste basket to find your letter and know where to send it."

BOSTON'S FIRE DEPARTMENT BEST IN U. S.

Number of Alarms Cut 15 Per Cent. Last Year, Murphy Tells Women's Charity Club

For the first time in their history, the Parker Hill hospitals have adequate fire protection since the city purchased $500,000 worth of motor fire apparatus capable of climbing the hill with facility, according to a statement made by John R. Murphy, former fire commissioner and candidate for mayor of Boston, speaking to the Women's Charity Club at the Hotel Vendome.

The new apparatus, he said, can go up the hill and down again in six minutes, giving real protection to the hospitals. He urged increasing care to prevent fires in Boston, where 80 per cent. of the blazes the department has to combat are caused by carelessness. The number of alarms was reduced 15 per cent. last year, he said.

Mr. Murphy added that five years ago the National Board of Fire Underwriters had called the Boston fire department the worst in the country, but after inspection and study last February declared it the best.

Humorist Tells of Talk With Harding and Will Hays

By WILL ROGERS
(Eminent Actor and Humorist)
Written Expressly for Universal Service

Washington, Nov. 5.—Well, went up to the White House again today to see if I could see the dog Laddie Boy. While I was being moved on by a policeman, out come Postmaster-General Will Hays and spied me and said, "Have you ever met the President?" I said no, that there wasn't anything I wanted, so I had never tried to meet him. Hays said, "If you don't want anything you will be a novelty, that's why he will meet you." I used to go to Col. Roosevelt's office in New York and tell him all my new political jokes I was using at the time. So one day Will Hays come in. He wasn't a general then, he was only a chairman. So Colonel Roosevelt said, "Why, Will, this cowboy has got some bully stuff. Here, you watch him and see that he only tells them on the Democrats."

Of course, I wouldn't tell jokes on the Republicans at that time. I never picked on anybody when they were down.

I told Mr. Hays I had written him a note when I first got to Washington, but had foolishly sent it by mail, and I guess he hadn't gotten it yet.

Well, he grabbed me by the arm and dragged me through three rooms full of Ohio office seekers. Didn't even knock. Shows you how that bird stands—just busted right in. But before he could introduce me, why, the President said, "Hello, where's your chewing gum?" So instead of feeling scared like, I felt about like I had met some old friendly cattleman from Oklahoma.

He started right in repeating jokes I used to tell in Ziegfeld's Midnight Frolic in New York. So you folks that think he come right from a farm in Ohio to the White House are cuckoo.

He gave me quite a little inside dope on the conference which I will tell you sometime.

I told him I would like to tell him all the latest political jokes. He said, "I know 'em; I appointed most of them."

I saw I didn't have any chance to match wits with that man, so I went out and met the dog, which I will tell you about later.

Gloucester, Nov. 5.—Mayor Wheeler has demanded that the present American Race Committee, which was in charge of the American side of the International Fishermen's Race, resign at once and that "men who know a bowsprit from the taffrail of a schooner be put in charge." This demand was made at a meeting called by the Mayor to consider unemployment in Gloucester and was cheered loudly.

LEGION MEN OF NEW ENGLAND IN MONTREAL

36 Hours to Be Spent Sightseeing; Delegates Arrive in Boston Tomorrow

By CHARLES O. POWER.

Montreal, Nov. 5.—Going out to the national conventions of the American Legion and the Auxiliary at Kansas City, Mo., the big New England party of delegates had but an hour to see Montreal, and most of that time was spent at breakfast in the Queen's Hotel.

Returning here in good order this morning, twenty-six hours will be allowed for sightseeing. The party is scheduled to leave tomorrow morning at 10 o'clock for Boston.

The most impressive things about the sight-seeing in Detroit were the big motor plants. Every process was seen and explained, from the handling of the raw material to the finished product. The Yankee visitors, accustomed though they are to big mills and factories, marvelled at the efficiency of effort and arrangement. It was voted by far the most instructive feature of the trip.

The visitors also were struck by the neighborly atmosphere in the bigger and better residential sections of the city.

The Yankee special has a new dress for the home-coming. Long banners hanging on the sides of the special cars "tell the world" that the party is from Massachusetts, while others in loud letters advertise the fact that Raymond O. Brackett of Marblehead is a national vice-commander of the American Legion. Still another long streamer announces that the State headquarters of the Massachusetts department is traveling.

The delegation has voted Tommy (Kloby) Corcoran of Lawrence the quietest and the most accommodating person on the tour. He met a number of his buddies of the 102d Artillery at Kansas City.

O'CONNOR RAPS CHARLESTOWN TANKS

Promises to Take Assessing Department From Control of Campaign Contributors

"I would be ashamed to face the men and women of Charlestown tonight if I favored the erection of a gasoline storage tank in this district," declared mayoralty candidate Charles S. O'Connor at a rally in the Frothingham School, Charlestown.

O'Connor said he actively opposes the erection of such a tank and declares it is a distinct menace to human lives and property. If elected Mayor he will immediately "fire" any department head who has gone on record in favor of it, he said.

"If they must have a tank in this city, let them put it in the Back Bay," O'Connor said. "If it explodes it will kill one-tenth less children to the square mile that it would in Charlestown.

"I promise you further that the assessing department of the city of Boston will be under the control of the Mayor of Boston and not under the control of any campaign contributors," he continued.

"That's the department the special interests seek to control. That's the department that is going to be run on a strictly equitable basis under the O'Connor administration.

"And it will be the first time in twenty years that assessments on property in this city have been levied with interests of the man or woman who is trying to acquire a home, or, preserve, protected. Their main object of benefit has been the interests of those who own property for the dollars they can grind out of them."
